STEPS TO PROTECT TICKET

Plan Formulated by Republican County TROUBLES OF A POSTMASTER Committee to Fill Vacancies.

RIGHTS OF CANDIDATES PROTECTED

Action Taken in View of County Clerk's Refusal to Accept Nomiantions of Committee Pending Court's Decision.

A business meeting at which only routine matters were attended to was held by the republican county committee in the new sampaign headquarters at 1712 Farnam street yesterday afternoon. The most important step taken was the adoption of a resolution introduced by Charles Unitt and a very small matter. Mrs. Ttmended by C. W. "I want my mamma," was the wall of a little tot of two summers as she sat in the big chair at the police station last night. He had been lost for an hour in the whirl of the crowds at 6 o'clock. The police found him at Sixteenth and Chicago streets. He had wandered all the way from the Boston store, where he had been separated from his mother. The candy the patrol conductor bought him was no consolation, and the efforts of all the office force, from the captain down, could not drive the grief out of his childish heart. When told that his mamma was on the way, he said: "No," and fresh tears would well into his pretty eyes as he repeated again and sgain, "I want mamma." Even when his mother held him in her arms he snuggled a little closer into her embrace and said, "I want mamma." His name was Willie Rigg and his parents live at 204 Ames avenue. It seems as if we'd been in this God-forsaken place for six months. If I were not afraid Evelyn would misinterpret my feelings I'd suggest to her that we cut it out and go to some The Degree of Honor lodge gave its first ball of the season last Tuesday evening. It was a masquerade affair and was enjoyed by a good crowd. morning, simply because I insisted on going up a certain path, while she wanted to take another. I'm afraid she's inclined to be rather flery when she finds that she can't have things her own way. Oh, well. It served to break the monotony for a few ninutes, and that was something. I can't see why anybody should ever think of coming to this place in search of pleasure, I'd be willing to let what I've paid for the other two weeks go if I could only think of some excuse for packing up tomorrow and getting out. September 26 - It's raining today and Eveleyn has a headache. She's lying down and crying about something. She refuses to tell me what it is. I believe I'll go outside and stand under the caves and let the water stream down on me. It will be thrilling for a minute or two, anyway. Had a great piece of luck this morning. The landlord found a deck of cards that the Young Women's Christian association Sunday. We know this will be an interesting and instructive meeting.

I've played twenty-one games of solitaire I've played twenty-one games of solitaire in and see Evelyn. Poor girl, she can't of course, help noticing how depressed I am, and that's probably what is making her miserable. I found her reading a newspaper three months old yesterday after-

September 27-I wonder what time it is? There's the office clock striking now, Only 10! It seems a week from breakfast till noon. Evelyn's head is better today, but she has something on her mind. I haven't heard her laugh once during the last three days. I wonder if she's sorry that she's mine? But, of course, she isn't, Why should she be? T've been as kind to her as any man on earth could have been under the circumstances. And she told me this morning when I was buttoning her waist that she was glad we were married, and that if I died first her soul would soon come to me in heaven. Oh, if somebody would only get lost and stray into this dismal old place what a relief it would be I wish it would burn down. Then we'd have to leave, and Evelyn would never need to know that I had felt as I do about it. I'm doing my best to appear cheerful when I'm with her, but I'm afraid I don't act the part very well. Perhaps she suspects the truth, and this may be the cause of her unhappiness. September 28-Hurrah! We're going away! We're going back to civilization, where we may again look upon other human beings and hear the voices of other people. I came about through a happy accident. I was talking to the landlord this morning. asking him if he hadn't an old novel around the place that I could borrow, and, without thinking, I added that I'd die before our three weeks were up if something didn't happen to break the monotony overhearing what I said, she flung her arms around my neck, saying she was so glad I felt that way, too. We're going in twenty minutes. But I can't see why she should have found it tiresome, as long a she had me here with her. A woman is a mighty hard thing to understand -S, E Kiser in the Record-Herald.
