

COULDCOMBLETS

STREETS GIVEN A MUD BATH

Indian Creek Takes Its Usual Trick After the Heavy Rain.

SOUTH MAIN STREET ALSO FLOODED

City Had Just Completed What Was Intended as Final Fall Cleaning, but Work Must Be Done Over Again.

The heavy rainstorm Monday night sent Indian creek out of its banks about midnight, with the usual result that Broadway from Tenth street to the Illinois Central tracks is covered with a deposit of slimy mud several inches deep.

The flood was not of long duration and after about an hour the water in the creek subsided. As one treading the height of the flood the water was within an inch or so of going over the North Eighth street bridge.

The heavy rain and hail was accompanied by a severe electrical storm which, beyond putting the electric light wires out of commission for the time being, did no serious damage.

On South Main street there was the usual torrent of water and the lower end of the street was covered yesterday with mud washed down from the hill streets, a number of which were badly damaged.

The streets and alleys committee had just given what it supposed was the final cleaning of Broadway and Main streets for the year and now it will be called upon to expend several hundred dollars in cleaning up again.

DEPOSITORS GET ALL THE CASH

Nothing Left for General Creditors of Sheldon Bank.

PHONGHAR, Ia., Oct. 17.—Judge Gaynor decided today that the lower end of the Sheldon State bank failure must be distributed among the depositors.

The Security bank is protected by the National Bank's Reports and will lose nothing, but the Peoples Savings bank loses nearly $13,000.

The National Bank of the Republic has been claiming to hold collateral security for $30,000, which gave it preference to this amount of the funds found by the receiver of the Sheldon bank.

Odd Fellows Grand Lodge.

CEAR RAPIDS, Ia., Oct. 17.—(Special Telegram.)—The Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Rebekahs and Patriarchs Militant opened today with reports of grand officers.

The lodges are prospering. Grand Master Tafford addressed 600 Odd Fellows and 200 Rebekahs present.

Funeral Instead of Wedding.

SIoux CITY, Ia., Oct. 17.—(Special.)—Clad in a mourning gown instead of the wedding tulle upon which she had been working for nuptial ceremonies which were to occur in two weeks, Miss Ora O'Neill of Denver, formerly of Sioux City, passed through Sioux City with the remains of her sweetheart, Francis Glennon, on the way to St. Paul, former home of the deceased young man.

The young people met in Denver, where Miss O'Neill had gone to care for two sick brothers, and where young Glennon was employed in a wholesale house. The funeral will be held in St. Paul.

Iowa Presbyterian Synod.

CEAR RAPIDS, Ia., Oct. 17.—(Special Telegram.)—Five hundred Presbyterian workers are in the city for the state synod, synodical Sabbath school institute and foreign synodical society.

The synod opens today with addresses by Mrs. Lameroux, Dr. John Balcom Shaw of Chicago. The synod opens today, followed by a mission synod to last over Sunday.

Friend's Silver Jubilee.

CEAR RAPIDS, Ia., Oct. 17.—(Special Telegram.)—The Catholic congregation, with a number of visiting clergymen, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of Right Rev. Father Gunn's pastorate of the Immaculate Conception parish.

The sermon was by Father Fitzpatrick of Marshalltown. At the reception there was a presentation of a purse of $1,200 to Father Gunn. One hundred outside visitors were present. Father Gunn is the oldest Catholic priest in Iowa. He was the first priest of the Sioux City see.

Thieves Work During Fire.

WATERLOO, Ia., Oct. 17.—(Special.)—The loss by the fire in the Sunday morning runs up several thousand dollars more than was at first estimated. The origin is still in mystery. At least $12,000 worth of property was destroyed. The insurance only partially covers the loss.

LOGAN, Ia., Oct. 17.—(Special.)—In the Harrison county district court this morning the criminal docket was resumed by the trial of the matter of the State of Iowa against Harry Rogers of Missouri Valley, who is charged with stealing $1,000 from a fellow workman's pocket. The court appointed

CAPITAN J. A. TRAVER OF DUNLAP AS THE DEFENDENT'S ATTORNEY.

OMAHA POLICY HOLDERS ACTIVE

Join Issue with Insurers in Insurance Case. (From a Staff Correspondent.) DEB MOINES, Oct. 17.—(Special Telegram.)—Judge Jacob Fawcett of Omaha is the city today in consultation with Attorney E. J. Walker concerning the Northwestern Life and Savings, against which Attorney Dyer recently began action by a receiver appointed, Judge Fawcett represents Nebraska policyholders and had a petition prepared to go into court when the action is begun here at a date ahead of his plans. The interests will likely be consolidated.

The trouble in the Yeoman order that has split it up into factions came to a head today when Dr. C. B. Paul, one of the deposed officers, struck Attorney Henry Evans and knocked him down. It happened at the Wellington hotel. Paul accused Evans of selling out the Anti-Saloon league to the saloon keepers, and Evans called him a liar.

CHILDREN ALLEGED POUL PLAY

Body of Iowa Woman Not Buried and Husband in Arrest.

SIoux CITY, Ia., Oct. 17.—(Special Telegram.)—Although Matthew Baldes reported heart failure, as the cause of his wife's death, children on the farm declared he had struck her a blow, which killed her and her relatives insisted upon the postponement of funeral, and the arrest of Baldes, who now is in jail at Orange City. The woman's body was badly bruised.

Buyers Shop Grounds.

SIoux CITY, Ia., Oct. 17.—(Special Telegram.)—A group of buyers, including the Grant Northern road, received orders today to pay the condemnation money on property on which the new $300,000 shops are to be built in Sioux City so that the company may come into immediate possession. Work is to be started without delay and rushed to completion.

Remedy for Dyspepsia.

CEAR RAPIDS, Ia., Oct. 17.—It developed today that the mysterious package addressed to John D. Rockefeller and left in an express office at Vinon two weeks ago contained an alleged remedy for dyspepsia and was left there by a driver of a Standard Oil company wagon who had faith in the cure and wanted Rockefeller to try it.

Commits Suicide on Street.

SIoux CITY, Ia., Oct. 17.—(Special Telegram.)—A man, whose name was given as John R. Smith, committed suicide on Fourth street, the main business thoroughfare, Peter Brooks, aged 34, this afternoon placed a revolver in his head and shot himself, dying a few minutes later at the police station. He had been drinking heavily.

Man Killed by Train.

SIoux CITY, Ia., Oct. 17.—(Special Telegram.)—Albert Amberg, a carpenter, fell from a freight train on the way to Omaha this afternoon and was instantly killed. A brother is a shoemaker in Omaha.

DENVER & RIO GRANDE MEETING

Edwin Gould Succeeds William H. Taylor as Member of Board of Directors.

DENVER, Oct. 17.—At the annual meeting of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad stockholders today these directors were elected: George J. Gould, Edwin Gould, Edward T. Jeffrey, Winslow B. Gerce, Arthur Coppell, Arthur B. Schiff, A. H. Cabel, Charles H. Schlacks, Joel F. Valle.

There was only one change, Edwin Gould succeeding William H. Taylor.

The annual report was submitted. It was made public some weeks ago by Mr. Jeffrey. The directors will meet in New York, probably next week, and elect officers.

One change was made in the board of the Rio Grande Southern, an adjunct of the Denver & Rio Grande. Jesse White, being the place of Otto Mearns, who has been a director of the company ever since it was organized and was for years its president.

CANNON AND DRAPER SPEAK

Edmund James Installed as President of Illinois University with Impressive Ceremonies.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 17.—Today was state national day at the exercises attending the installation of President Edmund James of the University of Illinois. The university military regiment assembled this afternoon and fired a salute in honor of Major General John F. Weston, representing the United States War department. General Weston afterward reviewed the regiment.

After a parade exercises were held at the armory. Joseph G. Cannon, speaker of the national house of representatives, a president of the university, and a number of others in the military training of a citizen soldier. There were other short addresses. Many persons went to the university chapel to attend the first session of the national conference of college and university trustees.

The address of Dr. Andrew Sloan Draper, a commissioner of education of New York state, was a feature of the conference.

EXAMINES DOUGHERTY'S BOOKS

Peoria School Board Will Make Investigation of Accounts of Indicted Official.

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 17.—The first step looking to an investigation into the accounts of Newton C. Dougherty, since he first became city superintendent of schools twenty-five years ago will be taken today. A committee representing the school board and consisting of Messrs. J. S. Stevens and Inspectors Treibel and Luxer, will let the contract to an auditing company to go over the books of the school board for a quarter of a century. The committee is in receipt of tenders from auditing companies and individuals from nearly every city of any importance, one of them being from the company now engaged in auditing the books of the Equitable Life Insurance company of New York.

Dougherty still continues to exhibit not the slightest concern as to the outcome, and is even said to have expressed to a friend the hope that "everything would come all right."

LYNCH KENTUCKY MURDERER

After Negro is Sentenced to Prison for Life a Mob Hears Him.

LONDON, Ky., Oct. 17.—Virgil Bowers, a negro, was taken out of the county jail here last night and hung to an apple tree on the road leading to Barboursville. The address of Dr. Andrew Sloan Draper, a commissioner of education of New York state, was a feature of the conference. Bowers continued to exhibit not the slightest concern as to the outcome, and is even said to have expressed to a friend the hope that "everything would come all right."

CARNEGIE ASKS FOR PEACE

American Sector of Scotch University Delivers Address at Inauguration.

HONORS FOR FIVE AMERICAN STATESMEN

Degree of Doctor of Laws Conferred by St. Andrew's University Upon Men Prominent in United States.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, Oct. 17.—Never before have so many distinguished Americans directly participated in ceremonies connected with the inauguration of the rector of a British university as paraded in today's functions at St. Andrews, when Andrew Carnegie was installed as rector for a second term. Whitehead Reid, the American ambassador at London; Charles Tower, American ambassador at Berlin; Bishop Henry Potter of New York and Dr. William J. Holland, director of the Carnegie museum at Pittsburgh, occupied seats on the platform and had conferred on them the honorary degree of doctor of laws, which also was bestowed on Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, New York, in absentia.

The hall was crowded with scarlet-gowned undergraduates of both sexes and the male students enlivened the proceedings with the usual amount of chaff and songs. The entrance of Carnegie was the signal for an outbreak of enthusiasm.

Five nations, or even three, banded together in a league of peace and inviting all other nations to join them, could banish all war in the future, this opinion was expressed today by Andrew Carnegie in his rectorial address to the students in the University of St. Andrews. In outlining the plan for the league of peace, Mr. Carnegie said:

"Five nations operated in quelling the recent Chinese disorders and rescuing their representatives in Pekin. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to remain neutral. It is perfectly possible for the world to operate in such a league of peace—inviting all other nations to join—and agreeing to prosecute any part of the civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, that no nation shall go to war, but rather shall be obliged to