MAN STILL BOSS OF TYPES

Many Barriers to Women Entering the Printing Trade.

NEW YORK PUTS UP THE BARS

Possible Effect of the Strike in Job Offices in Welcoming the Field for Women—What Chicago Plans.

Recent printers' strikes in Chicago job offices have suggested to women that another occupation is open to them—machine typesetting. In the course of these strikes it was stated that twenty-five girls were acting as strike breakers, and that the Chicago Typothetae, an organization of employers, had opened a school for typesetters which had women pupils.

When the school was opened seven firms belonging to the Typothetae sent young women in their employ, mostly typewriters and stenographers, to learn machine typesetting, continuing meanwhile to pay them their regular wages. These women acquitted themselves well—so well that the Typothetae advertised for 100 women typesetters to go to work in the big printing shops, and one employer declared that he would not dream of replacing his women machine typesetters with men, unless compelled to do so by unforeseen circumstances.

The discovery was made that proficient typewriters show a dexterity in the use of a typesetting machine which makes them the equal, at least, of the best men operators. It was also found that women, under proper instruction, may become sufficiently familiar with the mechanism of a typesetting machine to keep it in good running order.

Nevertheless, in New York far less enthusiasm is shown in the subject than the Chicago Typothetae say they feel. Men who employ printers and typesetters show not the least disposition to disparage the success of women in this field of industry, or to make invidious comparisons between men and women operators. Some go so far as to say that they have met women machine operators who were more proficient than some men in the same business.

Printers Skeptical.

But, almost without exception, when asked whether the woman typesetter was likely to multiply after the fashion of the typewriter and stenographer—whether hundreds of typewriters, lured by the hope of higher wages, were not likely to join the ranks of the machine typesetters—these men look doubtful and shake their heads.

They are quite sure a new field of industry awaits women in the machine typesetter, and they believe it is not a difficult step from the keyboard of a typewriter to the keyboard of a typesetter, but none is willing to prophesy that the field will be invaded to any great extent; that there will be a big rush to take the step.

The majority of women hold back from working in close company with a lot of printers," explained the foreman of a job printing house in New York. "To handle the question without gloves, it must be admitted that printers have the name, whether deserved or not, of being a rough lot. In some shops women might not run up against a shock to their ears very often, but they would be pretty likely to."

"Yes, this is one of the very few job printing offices in Manhattan which employ a woman typesetter, and the only one so far as I know, in which the woman typesetter takes from a graphophone the subject matter she sets in type."

Typesetting by Graphophone.

"In this office we make a specialty of printing law reports, consisting largely of testimony taken in court. Instead of the court stenographer typewriting his notes or preparing a copy of them to give to the printer he talks them into a graphophone, and afterward our woman machine typesetter, with the graphophone adjusted to the proper rate of speed at her ear, listens and sets up the type at the same time."

"I have to say, I have not yet run across a printer who showed any liking for this phase of typesetting. The graphophone bothers the men. They seem to consider it foreign to their business. But the woman we employ is an AI machine typesetter and she is just as willing to use the graphophone as to set up written copy.

"As undoubtedly before long the graphophone method of transmitting stenographic notes will be quite common, woman ought to find a good chance there to make big money."

"A good deal more, though, is required in the machine typesetting business than nimble fingers. I have known women who could turn out type with the best men in the business, but when it came to a test of power of endurance they dropped away behind."

"In every office there are occasions when a lot of overtime is demanded of employees. There is no help for it. On a rush job I am sure that men machine typesetters would find the bill better than women."

"Typesetting is no test of a woman's endurance compared with machine typesetting. On the other hand, to the woman's credit I put a desire to please, faithfulness and more amiability than the average man typesetter shows."

"Every now and then the best employer or foreman who ever lived loses his temper and isn't so awfully careful whose feelings get hurt. At such times, although the average woman may smile a bit and go home in a huff, she generally walks in as serenely the next day as if nothing had happened; whereas a printer will most likely rip out, 'Keep your old job!' clap on his hat and walk out. Men typesetters are an independent lot."

Supremacy of Men.

"To sum up, my idea is this: For mixed work—that is, work which includes machine typesetting and also typesetting which cannot be done on a machine—a man is far better than a woman, for the reason that he has generally learned the printer's trade, which alone is a matter of five years' apprenticeship or so."

There are twenty-nine typesetting machines over in the office of the Brooklyn Eagle, five of which are operated by women. With one exception the Eagle seems to be the only paper in Greater New York which employs women to run machine typesetters. That these women are highly satisfactory goes without saying.

"Were they not," says the manager, "their places would be filled by men."

"We have women who turn out from $5.00 to $6.00 a day, a better record than some of the men make, and when it comes to a question of reliability they are quite as satisfactory as the men typesetters.

"When it is a question only of straight, ordinary typesetting women now in the business do as well as men. When tabular work is to be considered or type arranged to cover three or four columns, men are apt to fill the bill better, for the reason that most men typesetters employed by newspapers are practical printers."

"There is no difference in the pay of a man and a woman machine typesetter, who do precisely the same work."

The manager of a machine typesetting school advanced the opinion that for some time to come the woman machine typesetter would be more popular in almost any other city in the country than in New York. Said he:

Marriage Affects Supply.

"At a rough estimate there are about 6,000 machine typesetters in Greater New York and of this number only thirty are women. About 10 per cent of the pupils of this school are women."

"Where do these pupils go? For the most part to the New England states, where the scale of printers' wages seems to be different from what it is here. At least I judge that some of the women receive less pay than the men."

"Another thing, a large percentage of the pupils I turn out get married before they have more than begun their work. Last winter six of them came in to tell me that they were going to be brides."

"To them fingering a keyboard comes easier than it would to a novice, and they also have a better drilling in spelling."

"Would a refined woman find the machine typesetting business congenial, even though in a ten mile race for $50. At New Orleans in 1880, Buckler was matched against Martin Ryan in a seven day go-as-you-please race at New Orleans for $50 a side. Ryan quit after three days, the pace being too hot for him.

After that Buckler turned his attention to road walking. He tramped from Newport to Cardiff and covered fifty miles per day, walking twelve hours for six consecutive days. In 1886 he secured second prize in a six-day go-as-you-please race, at Birmingham, and in a special match of a week's walk against E. Thomas at Albert Hall, Newport. Buckler won the prize being $100. Soon after he backed himself to walk 500 miles in a week, and he won by covering 505 miles. At Bristol, in 1892, Buckler walked fifty-three miles a day for six consecutive days, the tramping time being restricted to ten and one-half hours.

In 1894, at Swansea, Buckler attacked William Gates' world's record and tramped 4,000 quarter miles in 4,000 consecutive periods of nine and one-half minutes. Two years later at Humelet he improved on this feat by reducing the walking period to nine and one-quarter minutes, and still later, at Black Bull grounds, Leeds, walked 4,000 quarter miles in periods of nine minutes flat. It was the most grueling feat of his career, as he several times lost his mental balance. But he kept on to the end and as a reward was given a gold medal valued at 30 guineas as a souvenir of his historic feat.

In 1903 at Wigan Buckler failed to cover a mile and a half and fifty yards in 1,500 consecutive hours and tried the same feat again in July, 1904, another failure being the result. He made a third attempt in September and was successful. A crowd of 5,000 persons gathered to see Buckler the last night. Confident he could make a big improvement on this record he walked the same feat again last July. With the object of again setting up new figures Buckler began his last task on August 1 last and improved the record to 2,628 miles and 750 yards.

Making No Invidious Comparisons.

Putnam had just slain the wolf.

"It wasn't much of an exploit," he said to the reporters, with his accustomed modesty. "Still, considering the primitive nature of the weapons I had to use, I reckon it was fully as daring a thing to do as if I had made a walking arsenal of myself with breechloading rifles and magazine guns, and gone out to Colorado to shoot bobcats—and I'm not naming any names, either."

Remarking that the incident would live in history without any adventitious aids, he declined, with some irritation, to pose for the man with the camera.—Chicago Tribune.

His Partner Shot.

"Don't take it so hard, Mr. Pinman," said the young woman mockingly. "There are other girls, you know. There's Li Gumpkins, Sallie Pilbourn, Kate Insignioles and Fan Billiwink. Any one of them would make a better wife for you than I would."

"I know it," he said, swallowing a lump in his throat and turning to go. "If any one of those four girls had said yes, do you suppose I would ever have thought of coming here for a wife?"—Chicago Tribune.

GRATEFUL TO CUTICURA

For Instant Relief and Speedy Cure of Raw and Scaly Humour, Itching Day and Night.

SUFFERED FOR MONTHS

"I wish you would publish this letter so that others suffering as I have may be helped. For months awful sores covered my face and neck, scabs forming, itching terribly day and night, breaking open, and running blood and matter. I had tried many remedies, but was growing worse, when I started with Cuticura. The first application gave me instant relief, and when I had used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment, I was completely cured. (signed) Miss Nellie Vander Wiele, Lakeside, N.Y."
