The election passed off unusually quietly, little interest being manifested. While the registration was only a little over 3,000, the vote cast was lighter still, there being only 2,570 votes cast. Party workers were busy all day, but even with all the efforts made it was a hard matter to get the voters out. Contrary to expectations, the number of non-registered voters who asked have their votes sworn in was light, there being only about 100 who applied to the city clerk for certificates entitling them

Good order prevailed and only a few arrests were made by the police. A barlander employed at Barney Cogan's saloon on Q street was arrested for keeping h's aloon open during voting hours but this was the only infraction of the closing order reported.

the Omaha Water company outside the city limits of Omaha was continued before Judge Munger in the United States circuit court Tuesday morning. Attorney R. S. Hall opened the argument in behalf of the water company. The gist of his argument was that under the law of 1903 it was mandatory upon the city of Omaha to buy or construct a system of water works and under the contract between the city and the water company by the ordinance establishing the present system of water works the city had no other recourse than to buy the property of the Omaha Water company. He elaborated upon the meaning and wording of the contract and insisted the words "system" and "plant" contemplated the entire system of the Omaha plant without

Judge Woolworth's Argument. Judge J. M. Woolworth, in behalf of the water company, elaborated exhaustively upon the question of the appraisement and the creation of the board of appraisers. "The court," he said, "has no right to interfere with the appraisers while these proceedings are in controversy. To do so will be to make confusion doubly confounded. It will do no good to interfere. "We have no objection to the appraisers estimating the value of the property in different items, but the valuation must be as a whole. We are not responsible for the time wasted in the appraisement. That responsibility rests with the appraisers. I hold the city should be held to its contract after the agreement was made for the appraisement. These appraisers are engineers of great experience and professionally knew what should be appraised and what should be taken into account There was no one else to fix this valuation Now the city proposes to take it out of the hands of the appraisers. We insist on the letter of the contract as made by the parties to it. For this court to do otherwise will be to go outside the law. The Water board and the city should have spoken when it had a right to speak. At one time a city attorney of Omaha, when this contract was pending, said all of the property of the water company was necessary for the operation of the system. This of course meant South Omaha and adjoin-

Wright Closes Argument. Former City Attorney C. R. Wright closed the argument for the city and water board at 3:30. His line of argument was the same general tenor as that of Mr. Webster in the opening argument in which he held the appraisement had been protracted to great length and at a big cost to the city. "It will be impossible for the city to yote bonds for the purchase of the water works," he said, "until it is known what it is to buy. We are not opposing the appraisement but what we do want is a definite appraisement of the property of the water company within the city limits of Omaha." Judge Munger took the matter under advinement but did not signify any time as to when he would pass upon the mat-

CITY COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

B. F. Thomas Presents Revised Ordinances, Which Are Read Twice.

PROTEST ON MERCER POND NUISANCE

City Engineer Pronounces it Menace to Community and Urges it Drained by Owner.

The compilation and revision of the city ordinances which has been in the hands of B. F. Thomas for about a year and one-half has been completed, approved by the legal department, accepted by the council and $1,500, or the contract price, ordered paid to Mr. Thomas.

The book, which has been set up and put together by the printers, was submitted to the council in the form of an ordinance. read the first and second times and referred to the judiciary committee. The volume has 564 pages and will be the first publication of the kind since 1890.

Although it was election night and the rustom in the council has been to adjourn on that evening, the councilmen proceeded to attack business the same as usual, but having little of more than routine importance before it, got through early and adjourned before 9 o'clock.

Mercer Pond Nuisance. Engineer Rosewater called the council's attention again to the Mercer pond, lying between Forty-second and Forty-fifth streets and Nicholas and Izard, which he says is unsightly and a menace to the health of residents of the vicinity. Under an ordinance enacted to cover nulsances passed not long ago the engineer suggested the owner of the property be cited to appear and show cause why the pend should not be drained and the costs taxed up to it. The council followed the recommendations and named Monday afternoon, November 27, as the time for the hearing.

City Attorney Breen reported adversely to allowing $1.148 as the pay for 138 deputy sheriffs employed by the county during the labor troubles in the spring of 1908. He said the city was under no legal obligation to pay the men as no official action had ever been taken authorizing their employment or compensation, notwithstanding any private arrangement the councilmen may have made. He suggested the men be paid by the county, the county present a bill to the city and the matter considered then. His report was adopted. PIECE APPRAISAL WILL GO

Pay for Paving. A resolution by Back was adopted directing Hayden Brothers to replace the paving and surface of the alley between Dodge and Douglas street displaced in building a subway, and put in good condition, according to the tersm of the permit issued for the work.

Several more protests, bearing altogether ninety names, were received objecting to any enlargement of Riverview park. Another raid, a small one, was made on the delinquent tax reserve by ordering $150 transferred to the emergency hospital fund. The petition calling for the repaving of Farnam street from Thirteenth to Eighteenth with asphalt was approved by the legal department and the city clerk ordered to make the necessary advertisements in Attacks Victim in Bed and Slashes Her in Several Places.

BOTH BOARDERS OF CAMBRIDGE HOTEL

Woman Declares Man Total Stranger to Her and Cannot Account for His Crime-Assailant Arrested.

After making an attempt to escape from the Cambridge hotel before the police arrived and then trying to work a ruse when Patrolmen Cunningham and Vobril reached the hotel, E. Smith, colored, was arrested Tuesday morning on the charge of cutting with intent to kill Miss Irene Connors, an occupant of the hotel. Miss Conners accuses Smith of assaulting her with a knife. Smith denies the charge.

The woman, who is white, was cut in seven places, the deepest gash being a long wound to the bone on the left cheek. There is one cut over the right eye, another close to the jugular vein and other cuts around the neck. Aside from the one on the cheek the wounds are superficial. Miss Connors was removed to the Clarkson hospital, where Dr. Scott took twenty-five stitches in closing up the wounds.

Woman's Version of Affair.

So far as can be learned from the woman, who is weak from loss of blood, her assailant broke into her room and began slashing at her while she was yet in bed. The woman says she made a desperate struggle to get away and did succeed to the extent of getting out into the hall and trying to enter the room of James Thompson, colored, who is charged at the city jall with being a state witness. Thompson says the first he heard of the trouble was when he opened his door and saw Smith when he opened his door and saw Smith and the woman struggling in the halls. That the woman made a struggle in her room is evident from the fact the room is spattered with blood. Smith was more or less covered with blood when arrested. The Gordon, proprietor of the Cambridge hotel, said Smith came downstairs after the trouble and tried to get out, but was prevented by being locked in. Evidently he then proceeded to the upper floors of the hotel, as the walls along the stairways are overed with bloody fingermarks.

woman's condition when found in her room

When the officers reached the hotel Smith was on the second floor, where the assault occurred, and Gordon was guarding the front door. Smith immediately pointed out James Thompson as the man who did the cutting, but when both men were brought before Miss Connors she stoutly maintained Smith was the assailant. Mrs. Hoover, who cooms in the hotel, said she saw Smith during the morning with a razor and knife. Miss Connors declares Smith is a stranger to her and the woman says she is at a loss to account for the assault.

Woman Dangerously Hurt. It later develops that Smith may have to face the charge of murder for the wanton assault he committed. After the surgeons at the Clarkson hospital had dressed the wounds on Miss Connors' face and neck a narrow wound was discovered in her left side. This is by far the most serious of all. It was made by a straight stab of the knife that was aimed at her heart. This organ was not injured, but was narrowly missed. It is thought that the steel did penetrate her left lung, and the stab may be fatal at any mement. The wound was not discovered at first because scarcely a drop of blood flowed from it. Miss Connors was unable to tell where she was suffering the most. Soon the symptoms of a deeper wound developed and an examination brought it
