Some of the Best Dressed Women Seen on Omaha Streets

IF THE women of Omaha have a distinguishing feature in matters of dress, it is to their extreme modesty in dressing for the street. So very reluctant are they to wear their better gowns out in public places that with people whose estimate is formed only from seeing them in street costume, they do not bear the reputation as good dressers that they deserve. As a matter of fact, the Omaha women have the clothes—suits that cost handsome sums and that suffer nothing by comparison with those that come from the east or even from over the water. Many of them are imported, but by far the greater majority are made by the fashionable modistes and tailors right here in town, and furthermore these same modistes and tailors are in demand by the well dressed women of many other cities, east and west.

While many of these costumes might properly be styled street suits, it is only at the theater, an afternoon reception, or other semi-public functions, that the general public is privileged to see them. Occasionally they are worn out on the street, but only occasionally. A few gems of a few choice wardrobes, as seen by glimpses here and there, make an interesting catalogue.

Mrs. Theodore J. Wint is one of the best tailored women in Omaha and one of her handsomest costumes is a short coat tailor suit of blue cloth. With this she wears a suit hat and ermine furs.

Mrs. Frank S. Cowgill has a smartly tailored gray suit, made with the long coat, with which she wears chinchilla.

Mrs. H. Hugo Brandeis is another of Omaha's noticeably well dressed women, and this season is wearing at least three stunning suits. Among them is a blue velvet, with short coat, and another blue cloth suit, with which she wears chinchilla or sable.

A paddock of tan cloth, displayed by Miss Ada Kirkendall, is one of the best tailored garments in Omaha.

Mrs. Ben Gallagher is wearing a green cloth suit, with short coat, that is the envy of some of the best dressed.

Another strikingly handsome suit belongs to Mrs. Floyd Smith. It is of amethyst cloth, with trimmings of black silk braid, and the coat is long.

Miss Mildred Lomax wears a green cloth suit this fall, with long coat and green hat. The muff is of mink, with velvet ribbons, and the collar has the large buckle at the back that is as yet too extreme to have become generally worn.

The amethyst cloth suit in which Mrs. Charles Kountze drove was one of the handsomest coat suits seen at the horse show.

Mrs. Dick Stewart is showing herself in one of the very latest things in coat suits. It is of invisible red and black plaid, made with the short pony coat that is so new that its slightly short-waisted effect is not appreciated as it should be.

Miss Phoebe Smith is wearing a stunning suit of Alice blue. The coat is short and trimmed with two shades of blue braid.

Mrs. W. R. McKeen, jr., has an elaborately trimmed suit of green cloth and velvet.

Mrs. W. B. Meikle is wearing a handsome cloth suit of gray, elaborately trimmed with braid.

Miss Marie Mohler has a new brown velvet suit that is one of the stunningest worn among the fashionable women. The coat is short and she wears ermine with it. She also wears a tan Paquin coat that is a work of art.

Mrs. Luther Kountze is always one of the best dressed women in society in the way of tailored suits and this fall a tan cloth Newmarket coat suit is one of her most attractive costumes.

Miss Bessie Brady is wearing one of the smartest tailor suits seen commonly on the street. It is of gray cloth, with short round skirt and a long coat, severely plain, trimmed only with the velvet collar.

Mrs. John A. McShane has a handsome dark blue velvet suit, trimmed rather elaborately with black silk braid. The coat is short and the braid is used on it, as well as the skirt.

Miss Bourke looks fine in a handsome blue cloth suit that is very plain, with short skirt and coat.

Mrs. Charles Metz has one of the stunningest velvet suits. It is of dark blue, with braid trimmings.

Mrs. Arthur Remington is wearing a striking gray coat suit. The coat is long and severely plain and the skirt the round length. Earlier in the fall Mrs. Remington wore a very smart white serge suit. The coat was short, and with the short round skirt was elaborately trimmed with white braid.

Mrs. A. D. Brandeis is wearing one of the handsomest black cloth suits. The skirt is short and the coat a long paddock.

And besides these, there are more than a score of swell new suits for some of the best dressed women in town, still in the make, that will not be seen much before the holidays.
