HISTORIC ROMANCE REVIVED

Kinship of the Ord Family to the Fourth George of England.
RICH ESTATE AWAITING NIGHTFUL HEIRS
Alleged American Heirs Famous in American Army—Romantic Story of Mrs. Fitzherbert and Her Exiled Son.
The recent opening by royal order of sealed records in the Courts in London revives the story that the Ord family, famous in American military annals, are descendants of King George IV of England and Mrs. Maria Fitzherbert, and heir to a portion of a fortune estimated at $15,000,000. The Chicago Chronicle gives prominence to the story, claiming that James L. Ord, a member of the family residing in Chicago, will press his claim to a share of the estate. The Chronicle story follows:
The Ord family have been known in America for a century and there are several now living who are directly descended from James Ord.
Perhaps the most romantic career in the history of this family is that of James G. Ord, lieutenant in the United States army, who fell in Dumfries' attack on the eastern heights at the battle of Santiago. Had the law of primogeniture been followed this young man would undoubtedly have been yielding his life in the thick of battle. It is a poetic recompense that it was against Spain, traditional enemy of England since the days of Phillip II, that he fell. He had barely been in the service a month, being one of the West Point cadets pushed forward by the experiences of the war and the sudden demand for officers created. The Ord, from the beginning, have inclined to the military primarily and to the judiciary secondarily. James Ord, himself the son of George IV, was prominent on the American side in the war of 1812, although it was alleged that he was urged to enlist in the American army by British spies in order to invalidate any claims he might later make to the crown on the ground of treason. His eldest son, Major General E. O. C. Ord, served in the Union army during the civil war, dying in San Francisco in 1864. Captain E. O. C. Ord, son of the major general was appointed to West Point from Texas, was for a number of years an officer of the Twenty-fifth infantry and was retired from the service in October, 1903. He is now living in San Antonio.
Another military son of the family is James C. Ord, great-grandson of King George, who entered the service from West Point in 1872, retiring as a major of the Fourth cavalry in 1899. The major was born in Michigan, but received his appointment from Wyoming, where his father was serving at the time.
Prominent on the Bench.
The Ord's have been equally prominent in the judiciary, having had prominent members of the bench and bar in several states. Judge Pacificus Ord, a prominent California jurist, was the eldest son of the original James Ord. He was well known on the coast. John S. Ord of Santa Cruz, Cal., father of James L. Ord of Chicago, was the second son of Mrs. Fitzherbert's son. The Holliday family of California is directly connected with the Ord's through the marriage of John S. Ord's daughter Alice to S. W. Holliday. Dr. James Ord of Frederick, Md., who bears a striking personal likeness to the present king, a likeness so striking that it has made him famous throughout the state and gained for him the popular title of "your majesty of Maryland," was James Ord's third son. Dr. Ord has always believed that Mrs. Fitzherbert's character would be cleared and has at all times been instrumental in clearing up the matter. During his investigations Dr. Ord discovered an old history of Georgetown college which showed that in the year 1800 the college was attended by James Ord, son of George IV and Mrs. Fitzherbert, "his lawful wife," to quote the words of the old record.

Long Dispute Over Packet.
The successful opening of the packet at Coutts' bank, which contained the substantiation of the claims of the Ord's and which marked the end of seventy years of litigation, was principally due, in its inception, to the late Lord Stourton, one of the three men who deposited the remaining year letter at the instance of King George upon the occasion of his later and most unhappy marriage to Princess Charlotte, the other two members of the commission being the duke of Wellington and the earl of Albemarle. Before his death Lord Stourton empowered his brother, Hon. Charles Langdale, to demand of the executor of the earl of Albemarle's estates permission to withdraw the papers from the bank, but the executor, Rev. E. S. Keppel, declined to grant the permission. This is the reply of Rev. Keppel to Mr. Langdale's request: "QUIDENHAM, Attleborough, Nov. 24, 1851.—Sir: I must beg you to accept my apology for not answering your letter of the 10th inst. I have not had time to do so until I had consulted some whose position and station in life and judgment might guide me to a right decision. I have not at present had the opportunity of talking over the circumstances with any one and therefore hope you will not press me for a few weeks to come to a decision. The packet you refer to is in the hands of the seals at present in my hands. My own opinion, I may add, is that an unfair aspersion has been made on the character of Mrs. Fitzherbert by the late Lord Holland and now published by his son. I have by me copies of my correspondence with the duke of Wellington, your brother and yourself, and I hardly see how the duke could have been so much deceived for me for some time. I am, faithfully yours, EDWARD S. KEPPEL."
Lord Stourton Was Perseverent.
When Mr. Keppel finally did a demand was again made on the Coutts bank by Mr. Langdale, the brother of Lord Stourton, but it was refused on the ground that no one had authority to break the seal of the packet until the duke of Wellington, during his lifetime Lord Stourton strenuously endeavored to get at the packet. He left behind a long letter in which he said in part:
In the midst of afflictions which weighed down the latter part of the years of Mrs. Fitzherbert the thought which most soothed her pains and assuaged her grief was the consoling testimony which would be borne to her character when she should be no more; when all the actors in this extraordinary drama, being removed by the hand of death, the veil might be drawn aside, and she might be vindicated by the public eye. He stated that his father would consent to break the seal of the packet if the prince according to the rites of the Catholic church in this country, by uncle Edward, and her brother, Jack Smythe, being the witnesses to the contract along with the Protestant clergyman who officiated at the ceremony. No Catholic priest officiated. A certificate of the marriage is extant in the handwriting of the prince and with his signature and that of Mrs. Fitzherbert. The witnesses' names were added, but at the earnest request of Mrs. Fitzherbert, she and her brother, Mr. Fitzherbert, with her own scissors, to save the boy from the peril of the law, the interruption to this ill-fated engagement arose from the pecuniary difficulties of his royal highness.

Unhappy Princess Charlotte.
It was the pecuniary difficulties to which Lord Stourton refers in the latter part of his narrative that impelled the prince into his later marriage with Princess Charlotte of Brunswick. Lord Holland says in his memoirs that at the time of the marriage to Princess Charlotte the prince was so under the influence of stimulants as to almost disqualify him from going through with the ceremony, attributing this condition to the desire to call the king the father-in-law. After the granting of this divorce the prince went back to Mrs. Fitzherbert again. She refused his attentions until the matter had been passed upon by the pope, being a very devout Catholic. Upon a favorable decision of the pontiff she finally received the prince as her husband at a reception given at her residence, at which members of the royal family were present.
For several years they lived happily and contentedly together. It was after Prince George had succeeded to the throne that his marriage of state occurred. Then Mrs. Fitzherbert separated from him. During his last illness, however, she wrote to the king tendering him her sincere sympathy and offering any attention she could give. This letter was found on his pillow after his death. After his death she was treated as one of the royal family during the period of her life. She received consideration and attention due to royal rank everywhere.
Mrs. Fitzherbert Honored.
The duke of York was her devoted friend and William IV offered to make her a duchess, at the same time authorizing her to wear mourning for her husband. It was known to all the royal family that a son had been born to Mrs. Fitzherbert and some questions about the succession to the throne arose.
The facts regarding the boy's birth were placed in the now famous packet, sealed by Lord Stourton, the duke of Wellington and the earl of Albemarle and placed with

MELLIN'S FOOD

For the Baby
You may be thinking of using an artificial food for your baby. Try Mellin's Food; it is a proper food suited to the baby's condition. It is not a medicine but a true food. Let us send you a sample to try.
Mellin's Food is the ONLY Infant's Food, which received the Grand Prix, Highest Award, at the London Exhibition, London, 1904. Highest or that a gold medal.
MELLIN'S FOOD CO., BOSTON, MASS.

setting contains a chapter on "Cannera." That chapter charges the beef packers with saying "Send your old, unclean, crippled animals to us." He also says that the men who make up the Beef Trust are willing to sacrifice human life even in this manufacture of unclean and unwholesome meat. The chapter also says that the quarter of beef in the local market shows that it passed the inspection of an official appointed by the United States. All this is utterly false. The packers do not make a business of slaughtering diseased cattle, and if they did the government inspectors would promptly put a stop to it. Government inspectors are not on unclean meat. Let me tell you that all the cattle coming under the class of canners killed by the packing houses are inspected by the government inspectors. The article aims to injure the packers, but it is a stab at the entire cattle raising industry, as it condemns a large portion of the cattle which are shipped in and sold upon the open market, and to which no exception can be taken except that they are not as fat as they might be.
The writer of the book says that all thin cattle, or canners, as he calls them, are unwholesome and unfit for food, but that if you take you that because cattle are thin in flesh it does not make them unwholesome or unfit for food. The writer does not know what he is writing. There are no cattle of any kind, beef or sheep unloaded at any stock yards or packing house under United States inspection, both ante and post-mortem, by competent inspectors, and all that are found to be diseased or in any other condition that would unfit them for food are condemned and destroyed under the supervision of an employee of the United States government. Such employees of the bureau have full liberty of the packing house begin work when slaughter has started, which is at 7 a. m. From two o'clock until the afternoon the inspectors and assistants under him. All stock unloaded at the yards receive ante-mortem inspection. All animal carcasses that are inspected are not removed without a written permit from the inspector in charge. When the permit is issued, a post-mortem inspection is given the animals, and if found to be diseased or otherwise unfit for food, it is condemned and destroyed. Every employee of the bureau has full liberty of the packing house from this inspection, which is absolutely honest. Mr. Wilson has men on the road constantly, whose business it is to ascertain if the work is being done according to the rules and regulations of the department. So you see how impossible it is for diseased meats to be put upon the market, except by the inspectors, packing houses and plants which are not under inspection.

TORTURED BY ECZEMA

Body Mass of Sores. Could not Sleep. Spent Hundreds of Dollars on Doctors, but Grew Worse.
CURED BY CUTICURA FOR $8
"Cuticura saved the life of my mother, Mrs. Wm. J. Davis, of Stony Creek, Conn. Her was the worst eczema I ever saw. She was hardly able to eat or sleep. Her head and body was a mass of sores, and she despaired of recovery. Finally, after spending hundreds of dollars on doctors, growing worse all the time, I tried Cuticura. It cured her. I bought a box of Cuticura, and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent—Geo. C. Davis, 161 W. 34th St. N. Y."
