Quaint Features of Current Life

Explaining the Trouble.
F ANY ONE wonders at the queer stuff which emanates from this sanctum," says a Kansas paper, "this may be a partial explanation. Upstairs there is a sewing machine, a beginner of an alto horn, a cornet player, three pianists and two violinists. In the adjoining room is a gasoline engine with a bad cough and an industrial job press. The schoolhouse is only a block away."
An Embarrassed Editor.
"Why are all millionaires represented to be either fat or bald-headed?" asks a correspondent. Really, this places us in rather an embarrassing position, replies the Portland Oregonian. We haven't a hair on our head and tip the scales at 25 pounds avoirdupois, so we might be called fat and bald-headed. Your question, however, is easily answered. To be fat a man must have a clear conscience, a good digestion and an even temper. Baldness is usually caused by the gray matter of the brain circulating too rapidly and wearing off the roots of the hair. A man thus blessed by nature cannot help but get rich.
Heroinism for Tobacco.
During the South African war one of the privates in a British infantry regiment performed a very gallant deed. He dashed forward from the trenches across the valley, which was being swept by a hail of bullets, lifted a wounded comrade in his arms and carried him safely into shelter. The colonel, who witnessed the action, before the day was over called the private before him and evened his hair. Baldness is usually caused by the gray matter of the brain circulating too rapidly and wearing off the roots of the hair. A man thus blessed by nature cannot help but get rich.
Carried His Fare in His Ear.
A Chinaman in Pittsburg sat stolidly in the corner with his hands tucked carefully in his pants pockets in a manner Chinese have. When the conductor of the night car came to him John withdrew one hand, applied it to his ear and took out a dime. Even the conductor, accustomed to the eccentricities of all sorts and conditions of men, acknowledged that it was a new one. A New Yorker on the car said carrying their fare in their ears was a common trick of the Chinese in New York. They sit with their hands in pockets as if guarding their money but all the time they carry it in their ear in fear of robbery.

Progress Made in the Field of Electricity

An Electrical Exposition.
LECTRICIANS are planning to hold an exposition of their handicraft in Chicago early in January. One of the prominent features of the show will be machinery for a jumping spark created from the largest number of amperes and the highest voltage ever produced.
Many other features are being planned, some of which will be new. It is proposed to have the various telegraph and cable companies race around the world with messages, some going by way of San Francisco and others via New York. These messages will leave the Coliseum at the same hour each day the contest is on. The wireless telegraph will have daily demonstrations, inaugurating the series with a message to President Roosevelt announcing the opening of the most up-to-date exposition in the world.
There will be wireless telephoning—in fact, it looks as though the available 25,000 square feet will be small to accommodate the applicants for space. Edison, the "wizard," may be here, and during the progress of the exposition many of the technical clubs and associations from the various parts of the United States will attend, as well as organizations representing affiliated interests.
Odd Uses of the Telephone.
The telephone has come to be of assistance in about all the vocations and avocations of the everyday world, relates the Atlantic Monthly. Not only has it annihilated time and space on the superficial earth, but the Norwegian fishermen drop into the ocean depths a line with telephone attachment by which the swish of the approaching herring, codfish or mackerel is communicated to the anxious listeners above.
In some of the most delicate operations of hospital surgery the telephone proves helpful, and in ordinary medical practice the country mother raises the baby to the transmitter in order that the physician in the village may determine whether or not the cough is croupy.
Concerts have been transmitted more or less successfully over the wires, and Sunday morning preaching effectively conveyed. After a recent revival, in which scores of eager "seekers" had put in their requests for prayers, the evangelist handed his secretary a list of names with their telephone numbers and with the instruction: "Just call up each one of these sisters and brothers tomorrow morning and ask them how it goes with their souls. Tell them to keep on with their prayers and inform them that I am praying for them right along."
Municipal Light Plant in New York.
New York City's first experiment at municipal lighting will be started shortly. It is a lighting plant which the city has been constructing on Delancey street, under the Williamsburgh bridge approach, which is now almost completed and nearly equipped. With the lighting station the city has built an incinerator. The fuel used in this will be the vast quantities of waste paper and other rubbish gathered annually by the street cleaning department. The power developed by the incinerator will be used to generate electricity in the lighting plant.
The electric light plant will have a capacity of about 60 horse power and will light the entire Williamsburgh bridge. It is probable that a surplus can be used to ease of necessity for lighting the eight school houses which the city has built at various places under the long bridge approach. The plant is being equipped with duplicate machinery. If one set gives out or must be cleaned, the alternate one can be used.
The cost of the electric light plant and of the incinerator has been about $100,000.
For more than a year the Williamsburgh bridge has been lighted under contract by the Edison Electric Illuminating companies, which are a part of the Consolidated Gas company. As the city will soon light the bridge itself, it will cancel this contract.
Wireless Telegraphy in England.
An interesting parliamentary return just issued gives some particulars of the first three months' working of the British wireless telegraph act. Part of the return relates to licenses, seventy-eight applications for which have been received; the majority of these are for experimental purposes, but a fair number are for commercial purposes. No less than four companies have applied for licenses to establish stations to communicate with America; two of these have been granted, one is under consideration, and the fourth is offered with an alteration in locality. The paper also contains particulars of the working of the arrangement between the postoffice and the Marconi company. It seems that 131 messages have been received by the postoffice for transmission to outward-bound ships, of which twenty-one could not be delivered (in six cases, at least, through the sender's fault in transmitting after the latest guaranteed time). The number of messages received from ships at sea is 1,255, which, if it does not represent a very great volume of business, still serves to show that the system is beginning to develop in practical utility.

Curious and Romantic Capers of Cupid

Twin Sisters Are Brides.
MIXUP was narrowly averted at the altar when the double marriage of the Hall sisters took place in Sioux City. Their husbands were exactly alike and the minister and the bridegrooms, Thomas Evenden and Charles Allen, had to take their word for it as to which was which. Knowing the sisters were capricious the bridegrooms feared a practical joke.
The brides are so much alike that their own husbands can tell them apart only by their wedding rings. They were born the same hour, baptized the same day, and were always careful to have their wearing apparel exactly alike to the nearest detail.
Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hall, christened them Mamie and Minnie, but were always at the mercy of the girls when it came to identifying them. When they became old enough to have suitors the apricot for the favor of either of the twins found him at the mercy of the other. If the latter insisted that she was the one he was wooing he was unable to argue the point. Consequently their suitors were forced to come in pairs, and so long as both were thoroughly satisfied they were their rings and ties in such a manner as to enable the young men to tell which was Mamie and which Minnie.
Mistaken on the Run.
"She cost me $150 and then I lost her!" This was the plaint of Christopher Santona, a young business man who has made his competence. The two were childhood sweethearts in sunny Italy long ago and when the ardent lover departed for the United States to make a fortune for the bride-to-be Marie Cortella promised to be true and to follow him when he should send for her.
Santona prospered. He had a snug bank account, a cozy little home, a growing business. He sent $50 back home for Marie and the other day she sailed for the land of gold. Alas, on the trip she met Louis Couper, an old friend. He was even more ardent and confident than Christopher and he won Marie. So instead of his bride all that poor Christopher found at the railway station in Sioux Falls was a telegram from the faithless Marie telling him that it was never to be.
"Perhaps it is all for the best," sighed Christopher, going back to his empty house.
Married in Haste.
A few weeks ago there appeared in Johnston, N. Y., a handsome young fellow who took quarters at the best hotel in the place. He was so agreeable and gentlemanly that he soon had a host of friends who were proud to call John Gerald Dowdell "Jack." One of them was Miss Harriet Vanderpool, among the handsomest of the town's many belles.
"Jack is so different from most Johnston men," she exclaimed. "He knows how to entertain and make things agreeable to everybody."
It was love at first sight. A month ago they were married. Dowdell brought his bride to this city and they began house-keeping at 32 West Fifty-eighth street.
Then came the bride's little awakening from her dream. She read an anonymous letter told of another wife and children and now the case is in the hands of lawyers. Surely Dowdell was unlike most Johnston men!
