AUTOPSY ON BRANCH'S BODY

Effort Will Be Made to Discover Cause of Midshipman's Death.

JUDGE ADVOCATE CHALLENGES M'CORMICK

Prosecutor Alleges that Member of Court Showed Too Much Bias in Questioning Witnesses.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 24.—One of the most remarkable incidents in connection with naval court-martials in the history of this country marked today's session of the court which is trying Midshipman James R. Branch.

Rear Admiral Alexander H. McCormick, next in point of rank of the members of the court to Alexander Ramsey, its president, was challenged by Judge Advocate Marx after the whole testimony for the prosecution had been submitted.

"I have had a conversation with Medical Inspector Thomas C. Watson," said Admiral McCormick. "I did this in order that I might ask such questions of the witnesses brought before the court as would affirm or negative the possibility of Branch's death having occurred in the manner charged, and fully aware that in the end I must reach my conclusion upon the testimony of the witnesses before this court and in that manner only."

The testimony of the witnesses before this court and in that manner only. The court was cleared and upon its being reopened Admiral Ramsey announced that the challenge against Admiral McCormick had not been sustained.

Only seven in point of interest to the challenge entered against Admiral McCormick was the court's determination to request the secretary of the navy to order that the body of the late Midshipman Branch be exhumed and an autopsy held.

It is not certain how much can be revealed by an autopsy upon the remains of Midshipman Branch, who has been dead for about three weeks, but it is believed that almost absolute information can be obtained as to the existence of any previous diseased condition of the heart, brain or other organs such as would have made death possible at the time from any cause other than the blows received.

At the request of counsel for the accused the court directed that Medical Inspector H. E. Ames and Surgeon James D. Gatewood, both of whom are stationed at Washington, be directed to be present at the autopsy.

The prosecution closed its case this morning with the testimony of Surgeon A. M. McCormick, and it was this witness that Admiral McCormick asked the questions forming the basis for one of the grounds of the challenge by the judge advocate.

Testimony of Surgeon McCormick. Surgeon E. M. McCormick was the first witness called. He said: "I saw Branch between 10 and 11 Monday morning. He was unconscious, his left side was paralyzed, his right arm and leg were continually thrashing and he was much bruised about the face, head, shoulders and forearms. I think that the condition was brought about by the repeated blows he had received. I do not think his life could have been saved by any treatment, nor do I think that the hot bath or the other treatment he received from his friends accelerated his death."

Surgeon McCormick was examined very rigidly by Admiral A. H. McCormick of the court, the object being to bring out whether, or not any possible cause of death could have existed prior to the fight. The witness answered that it was impossible to say this absolutely in the absence of an autopsy, but that there was no reasonable doubt that the blows had caused Branch's death. Under this examination Surgeon McCormick was so excited and over-exertion might have contributed to the condition of Branch's death, but only in a secondary way.

Admiral McCormick evidently was not at all satisfied that the hot applications upon Branch's head by his companions on the night of the fight had not contributed to the death. He brought out from the witness that hot applications might contract veins if applied to them closely and continually.
