had her own way in all of the details connected with this momentous affair for Holiand. Holland is a profoundly obvistian country and the mere sugestion of such a possibility as a change in a prince onsort or a queen consort is revolting to its principles and sentiments. At 'he same time the marriage relation is said to be considered by Queen Wilhelmina herself as far too binding to allow of any such a solution of the question of succession. It is this very question of succession that is understood to be absorbing the attention of her government which is now busying itself with a revision of the constitution. Under present conditions the matter is by no means clear, but as the monarchy is a constitutional and heriditary one it is to be presumed that apart from any special enactment on the part of the Dutch people the succession would follow the same law of inheritance as that of Great Britian.

In this case the merest agante line of the House of Orange is now represented. by the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar, grandson of the princess Sophie of the Netherund second cousin to the present queen. The grand duke might choose between the crowns of Saxe-Weimar and Holland, but by the constitution of the German empire he could not carry both. It is therefore to be assumed that he would remain conteht with his present sovereign position

People Apathetic.

His rights of succession would next devolve on his sister or on the children of his aunt who became a Princess of Reuss. Of this family there are several princes, who might legitimately be called to the Orange throne.

More remote still from them is another line of agantes descended from an uncle of the late King William III-Prince Fredcrick of Orange, who married a Princess Louise of Prussia and whose daughter married the Prince of Weid.

Throughout Holland there exists today ar antipathy of all discussion of a possible suc cession to Wilhelmina. Of course the question of a succession must come up when Queen Withelmina dies, but just at present the proposition if discussed would wobably be discussed with disappointment and hitterness. It will be remembered that at the time the queen's wedding the wors "Republic" was cented on every hand when the question "who shall reign if there be no heir" was raised. Dr. Kuy per, the ex-prime minister once said that Holland would resort to arms rather than sink to German rule.

The succession to the throne is regu lated by Articles 10 to 20 of the constit lution, but inumnuch as the constitution is now being revised it apears to be mor than likely that the present states-genera will entirely revise these clauses, and much may yet be heard in favor of a republic for the loyalism of the Dutch people appears to be entirely limited to their. # IN INTEREST OF IRISH TONGUE

Father Dinneen Says Merchants Must Use Language in Business

if it Survives.

DUBLIN, Dec. 9 .- (Special Cablegram to The Bee.)-Americans who are interested in the campaign now being conducted in that country for a revival of interest in the Irish language will also be interested in the movements made by Rev. Father Dinneen, M. A., of this city, on this side of the water, while those having charge of the lands, sister of the late King William III Celtic propaganda are visiting the various American cities and towns,

Father Dinneen, in an address at Dungarvan this week, entered into an analysis of the conditions of life in the districts in which Irish still survives, and upon these investigations bases the conclusion that the fiving Irish speech is now in a desperate position. In his address he pleaded for a vigorous agitation to be conducted throughout the length and breadth of the Irishspeaking area of the country as the only effectual means of preserving the living language and enabling it to be extended to the other parts of the country. Such an agitation would have a powerful influence in determining the fate of the language in the country districts. But the hundreds of years. It is to this great language question in the towns was even a more difficult problem. There could not be an Irish-speaking country district in which the Irish language might be expected to hold a permanent sway without an Irish-speaking town. Unless this movement produced genuine Irish-speaking towns the language was lost. He relied largely upon the common sense and patriotism of the townspeople in various irish cities and towns to bring about the general use of the Irish language in these places.

Many Places in the United Kingdom.

LONDON, Dec. 9.-(Special Cablegram to The Bee )-Esperanto contines to spread at a rapid rate through the United Kingdom. It is the boast of the advocate of the new universal language that it is dready possible for a stranger, no matte what his nationality, to travel in almos any part of Great Britain and find students of Esperanto and make himself understood Just by way of illustration of the hold which the language is gaining on the enpire, two incidents which have happened in Cambridge may be mentioned. One o these incidents concerns the university, the other the town.

and has recently been quite overshadowed by the discussion of bushido and its effects Bushido, wonderful as its teachings and influences have been, is at best only a class religion, or, more properly speaking, an ethical code. Ancestor worship is universal. It may be said without any exaggera tion that every Japanese-man, woman and child-is an ancestor worshiper. This applies to the Christian convert as well as the Buddhist devotee. Ancestor worship, or more properly speaking, the veneration of incestors, is something independent of religion. It does not interfere with religion and it cannot be affected by it. It is worth noting that here in the Orient the greatest strides were made by the Jesuit fathers in gaining converts and power after they had declared that ancestor worship was not a religion and therefore need not be abandoned by the convert to Christianity. It should be thoroughly understood that ancestor worship does not stop with the veneration of the family ancestors. That is but the first step, and there follows the veneration of the clan delties and, the highest of all, the veneration of the imperial ancestors. In this way there is a perfect form of religion for the development of the patriotism and loyalty of the people as well as the morals of the home. The rites may differ slightly in the different plans, but the ideas are the same, and in every Japanese house there are shrines or places devoted to ancestor worship. Ancestor worship did not even suffer a setback during the days of the feudal system. An ethical code might be impossible of comprehension by the ignorant classes under such a system, but every family possessed ancestors and could venerate them. With the Japanese each day contains some minutes set apart for active veneration of the imperial ancestors. This daily act of loyalty has been continuously practiced for

Feels Guiltless of Wrong.

"I shall certainly ask for a vindication. and I feel confident that when all the real facts are known I shall not be deemed guilty of moral turpitude in extending to these men a courtesy that was perfectly within my province as an officer of the government "I feel deeply grateful for the many expressions of kindness that have greeted me from my friends in all quarters of the state in this unfortunate matter. I have no idea at this time who will be named as my successor: in fact I have been pretty busy for the last day or so and have not yet outlined my plans. I shall act entirely upon the advice of my friends in the matter and cannot say whether 1 shall go to Washington and lay my case before the president personally or not.

"In reference to the article in the New York Sun which retails the story of my accompanying these men to the theater. saloons and restaurants while they were my prisoners. I have not yet fully determined what I shall do, but in all likelfhood I may proceed against that publics. tion for criminal libel,"

Chief Deputy Marshal Earl Mathews, son of the deposed official, said:

"The loss of the office is nothing, but my father does not like to rest under the stigma that the removal implies."

Court Proceeding Blocked.

As soon as the notice of removal was sceived Friday evening, the proceedings of the office were at once suspended and will be erected according to the original winesses who were summoned for immedi plans inside of the estimated figures, which ate appearance were notified to diaregard the summons until further orders. Nothing can be done until a temporary appoint there will be no delay in the prosecution of ment is made and neither can any witthe work and that so far as weather will nesses or juror fees be paid until some one is nuthorized to sign the necessary checks The summary removal of Marshal Mathws from office has the effect of temporarily blocking all court proceedings of the federal building, particularly as regards the criminal proceedings in the I'nited States district court. This estopped of work lies in the legal inability to serve subpoenas and summonses for witnesses. The case of H. Marowitz, a pawabroker indicted for receiving government property a pawn which was to have been irled Saturday morning, has been passed for this cason. No criminal cases can be tried until a United States marshal is appointed componently to succeed Mr. Mathews to erve the necessary papers. The court would be incomplete without the presence of that important official. This peculiar case does not, however, apply to the civil cases, and the hearing of these cases will e resumed Monday, with the case of rlughes, against the Western Construction company, which involves a suit for damages growing out of the collapse of the Cronstadt mutineers on the charge of armed insurrection. War Minister Rudiger has issued order prohibiting the granting of leave to soldiers to stay out of barricks at night. It is reported that the garrison of Schleusselburg fortress has practically mutinied and is joining in the demand for
