Reason for Changing Chairman Now. There appears to be a considerable diversity of sentiment as to the advisability of displacing Warner as chairman at the present time. One view of the situation, favored by a large element, is that Warner can well be retained until the next convention meets, when the question of his retention can be settled.

AMERICANS ARE TOO PATIENT

Jerome K. Jerome Says Yankee Masses Are Paying Tribute to Plutocrats.

ADVOCATE OF PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Believes This Will Solve Many Serious Problems—Predicts Union of Canada and the United States.

Jerome K. Jerome believes that public ownership of public utilities will, to a large extent, solve many of the problems with which this country is now wrestling. The English author so expressed himself in an interview with a reporter for The Bee yesterday afternoon at the Millard hotel.

Americans are altogether too patient in the matter of asserting their rights. The thousands are paying tribute to the plutocrats who are exploiting the country, but this country must learn the lessons we have learned in England. The United States as a nation is bound to be a great nation. I also think the protective tariff a bad thing in that the people here pay excessively for inferior wares, competition being stifled and the monopolists fattened," said Mr. Jerome.

Mr. Jerome is a student of social and economical subjects, which he believes are rather weighty matters to be discussed in a short interview, yet he consented to give a few of his impressions received along the way since he left New York City early in October.

Impression of American Woman. "When I was in the city of the American woman by this time" was asked of the author.

"Oh, I was quite prepared for her by statistics before I left England," was the serious and ready response. "There is less difference between the American man and woman than there is in the sexes of other nations. What the women of this country have gained in some directions by entering the commercial and other fields she has lost in other directions—what she has gained in strength she has lost in sweetness."

The English writer's first visit to this country, although he has been in close touch with the United States for years by studying in the perspective. Mr. Jerome is more of an American than one would expect to meet.

I had the country in my mind's eye, as it were, before I arrived, and was disappointed not particularly surprised. The railroad systems are great affairs. I think improvement could be made in the bus accommodations from the depots to hotels, so a man may be able to get his luggage when he reaches his hotel," remarked the man of letters.

"Are you nearly ready to go skating?" questioned Mrs. Jerome, as she passed down the hall.

"In a few minutes, dear," responded Jerome.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerome took a trip to Hanscom park with their skates.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerome will proceed to the Pacific coast from Omaha, stopping at Denver, and will return to England May 1.

SOMETHING NEW IN THRILLS

"Whirlwind of Death," by Which an Automobile is Made to Turn a Somersault.

The demand for perilous and foolhardy acrobatic feats has been compared to the enthusiasm in ancient times for exhibitions of brutality and bloodshed. Modern audiences pay, and pay enormously, to see a man or a woman face death in midair and miss it by a hair's breadth, all to afford them a moment's diversion.

Today the automobile is in the highest favor in this class of "thrillers." Each season brings some new act. To make an automobile, weighing a ton or so, gyrate a some startling manner in midair and from it reach the ground in safety, passes or art. It almost seems that the limit had been reached in the feats of daring possible to this class of performers when an automobile was made to loop the gap and bring its occupant away alive.

A still more amazing feat of this kind has been devised recently in France, in which an automobile actually turns a somersault in midair.

The "thriller" of one season becomes tame enough the following year. The entire series of aerial feats as we look back form a gradual evolution and in its way a logical one. How much further this development may be carried is uncertain.

For it seems probable that the law will step in very shortly to regulate them. In the first of these feats, which was considered marvelous enough at the time, a bicyclist rode his wheel at terrifying speed down a sixty-foot ladder placed at a steep incline. The feat was first performed in America. The rider was killed one night by an attack of vertigo. This feat was mere child's play, however, compared with the modern performances.

The "automobile," which has been witnessed on both sides of the Atlantic, was generally thought to mark the extreme limit in dangerous feats. In this case the automobile dashed down a steep incline constructed after the manner of a loop-the-loop, made a circuit of the circular track, completely reversing its position in doing so and running off on a horizontal at the other end. This feat was made more or less safe by having the wheels run in flanges, so that the car could not leave the track. The track soon became familiar and audiences were no longer interested in a feat, however thrilling in appearance, which lacked the actual danger of death. These revolving cars are familiar at seaside resorts the country over.

As might be expected, the next step in this evolution was to cut out that part of the loop which the wheels of the automobile jumped in making its circle, thus making the automobile loop the gap. This feat is said to be safer than it looks; but nevertheless, one woman has met her death in this way. The limit was not yet reached, however. A French woman has gone one step further. The latest death-defying act consists in having an automobile turn a somersault high in the air and reach the ground in safety, while its occupant bows and smiles to the spectators.

The new act is called "The Whirlwind of Death," and has already appeared in Paris. In this act the automobile, with its occupant firmly lashed to the seat, runs down an incline at a terrific speed and up a short curve, when it is launched fairly into space in a horizontal position. The track used is practically the same as the one employed by the "Human Arrow."

As the automobile reaches its highest elevation in midair it is made to turn a somersault.

The movement is accomplished by an ingenious arrangement of springs and levers. The gap in which it performs is about forty feet in width. The automobile somersault is rendered particularly thrilling by the slowness with which it turns. The position of the center of gravity in the machine is so arranged that the body of the woman seated in the car seems to move backward, at the instant of turning, faster than the center of the car is moving forward. At the moment of the somersault the vehicle appears to stop dead in its upward flight, and the illusion that it is about to fall is absolutely compelling. This effect has been received with shrieks of horror from the spectators, and there is a catching at the throat of the most hardened, but the car, with its human freight, plunges onward and reaches the landing platform in safety.—New York World.
