Some Interesting Timely and Tersely Told Tales Both Grim and Gay

A Break Trade in Sermons.

THE wife of a Philadelphia clergyman recently sold a box of waste paper to a ragman, says Success Magazine. In the box were a lot of manuscript sermons of her husband's. A month or so thereafter the ragman again came around, and asked if the woman had any more sermons to sell. "I have some waste paper," said she, "but why should you particularly want sermons?" "Well, mum, you see I did so well with them that I got here a month ago. I got sick up in Altoona, and a preacher there boarded me and my horse for a couple of weeks for that box of sermons, because I hadn't any money. Since then, he's got a great reputation in those parts as a preacher. I'll give 19 cents a pound for all you have,"—Success Magazine.

The Man Behind the Gun.

Soon after the close of the Spanish war Admiral Schley visited Bangor, Me. General Joseph Smith tendered him a reception, to which many of the city were invited. The people gathered from far and near, and the streets were filled with those who wished to get a glimpse of the admiral. Mrs. Parsons lives directly opposite General Smith's house, and the piazza and the steps of her house were crowded, when up the steps came Mrs. Casey, a comely Irish woman, clutching something tightly in her hand. Coming up to Mrs. D., who was seated on the piazza, she held out her hand, and in the palm lay a bronze medal which was given to her son for services rendered at Manila. "If ye please, will ye read what it says?" she asked, and Mrs. D. read: "To the Man Behind the Gun." "That's him," exclaimed Mrs. Casey. "That's him; that's my son. He got there for bravery; and could ye blame him, now?"—Chicago Inter Ocean.

On a Cash Basis.

An eminent physician in P— had cured a little child of a dangerous illness. The grateful mother turned her steps towards the house of the doctor's son. "Doctor," she said, "there are some things which cannot be repaid. I really don't know how to express my gratitude. I thought you would, perhaps, be so kind as to accept this purse, embroidered by my own hand." "Madam," replied the doctor, coldly, "medicine is no trivial affair, and our visits are to be rewarded only in money. Small presents serve to sustain friendships, but they do not sustain our families." "But doctor," said the lady, alarmed and wounded, "speak—tell me the fee." "Two hundred dollars, madam." The lady opened the embroidered purse, took out five bank notes of $100 each, gave two to the doctor, put the remaining three back in the purse, bowed coldly, and took her departure.—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Judicious Reply.

The young woman journalist was entertaining a half dozen Wellesley undergraduates at tea. It was an expensive tea, served in an expensive apartment. Plainly, the young woman journalist was doing well. "Yes, I am doing well," she admitted. "I write fashions now. But when I was a high-class journalist, interviewing celebrities, it was my own hook, I couldn't afford to give tea." "These celebrities! If they would only talk! You visit them expecting to extract a 35 story. You come away with a quarter one—or nothing." "Once I brought out Richard Watson Glider in order to get from him five or six columns of good stuff on 'Young Women in Literature.' A fetching subject, eh?" "But, alas, Mr. Glider wasn't in a talkative mood. When I suggested this glorious topic to him, when I opened fire with the question, 'What is the chief requisite for a young woman entering the literary field?' he replied: 'Postage stamps.'"—Buffalo Times.

Hot Coffee for Two.

One of the two secret service men who were on guard at the Roosevelt residence in Oyster Bay last summer has been telling the story of his experience there. Usually the two sat under a big tree all night, only taking refuge on the veranda in case of heavy rain. One very stormy and chilly night they had sought shelter there. Apparently every member of the household was in bed and so the officers were somewhat bored on peering a side door open. Mrs. Roosevelt peeped out and called them over, saying: "I've been worrying about you men in this awful night." "Some hot coffee would do you good. Come in and drink it. It was very late to call the cook, so I made it myself. I hope that it is all right." "It seemed to me to be the best coffee I ever tasted," remarked the secret service man when he told this little story.

Married the Wrong Man.

A strange case of matrimonial fraud has lately occurred at Vienna. A woman of the lower middle class married a man whose name was a Herr Weiss, her fiance, returning after a year's absence in America to make her his wife. In less than a month he robbed her of her savings and then suddenly disappeared. A month later she received a letter from America regretting that the wife had been damaged for injuries received in a railroad accident, but that she was about to sail, and that immediately on her arrival would fulfill his promise by leading her to the altar. The letter was signed "Herrmann Weiss." The poor woman was thrown into a sad condition of perplexity and apprehension and her worst fears were realized when, on her correspondent's arrival, she recognized that she had been imposed upon by a callous impostor whose resemblance to the real simon pure was marvellously striking. It subsequently transpired that the genuine Herrmann Weiss had while in America foregathered with a man whose name was a Herrmann Weiss, with his double, who had ascertained sufficient of the farmer's history and prospects to enable him to carry out with success his base scheme of deception and heartless robbery.

A Lively Catch.

Mrs. S.—And so you are leaving us, Bridget. And what are you going to do? Bridget—Please, mum, I'm going to get married. Mrs. S.—Dear me! Isn't that rather sudden? Who is the happy man? Bridget—Do you remember, mum, me asking you about four weeks ago to go to the funeral of a friend? Well, I do be going to marry the corpse's husband. Sure, he told me then I wuz the life of the party.—Harper's Weekly.

Great Fortunes of America as Compared with Old Times

THE great fortunes that have sprung up so amazingly in this country during recent decades, in the opinion of many serious thinkers, today constitute a menace to our national well-being, says Cleveland Moffett in writing of "The shameful misuse of Wealth," in Success Magazine. Without these great fortunes there would be no reign of luxury in America, no flaunting of feasts and follies, no riot of extravagance; with them we may expect all the evils that have in previous civilizations attended upon enormous riches. And many of these evils, as we have already seen, are actually with us. It is admitted that we are the richest people in the world today—the richest people the world has ever seen. The vast wealth of Croesus is estimated at only $5,000,000, but there are seventy American estates that average $5,000,000 each. As showing the rapid growth of individual fortunes in this country there is interest in a list of rich men printed in 1855 according to which New York City at that time boasted only twenty-eight millionaires. And a pamphlet published some years earlier says that in 1845 Philadelphia could show only ten estates valued at a million or more, the richest being that of Stephen Girard, which reached $7,000,000. In contrast to which in 1882 there were over 200 millionaires in Philadelphia. As to New York City, the number of millionaires, according to best information, is over 2,000, while the number of millionaires in the United States is at least 5,000 or half the total number in the world. There is one family alone, at the head of which stands the richest and most powerful man in the world, John D. Rockefeller, and the wealth of this family is estimated at a thousand million dollars, a sum so huge that the human mind quite fails to grasp it, a sum so huge that if at the birth of Christ Mr. Rockefeller had begun making a dollar a minute and had let all these dollars accumulate day and night for all these centuries, he would not yet, in 1905, have amassed a thousand million dollars. And if Mr. Rockefeller should today turn this wealth into gold coin and take it out of the country, say into Canada, he would carry across the border three times as much gold as would then remain in the United States. Nor would he carry it himself, for the weight of it would be 1,750 tons. And if he loaded it on the backs of porters, each man bearing on his own weight in solid gold (say 135 pounds), it would require 25,000 men to move it. And if they walked ten feet apart the line of them would reach forty-four miles and would occupy fifteen hours in passing a given point. None of which takes any account of the daily interest on this fortune, which interest, if paid in gold, would require the strength of seven men to carry it. If it would weigh 1,000 pounds. Such are the riches of a single family.

Girl Embraces Real Live Bear and Gushes Over the Fact

BAR HUGGING is an amusement which few people, particularly young women, would care to indulge in, and it is seldom one has the chance to embrace a real live "Bruin" in his native haunts, even in the West. Miss Wells, a girl of 15, who had the nerve and the inclination to try it. The opportunity, however, came not long ago to Miss Bessie Wells, a pretty little Texas lass, who visited in Seattle recently, and she started W. D. Cameron, who happened to be with her at the time, by giving a full-grown cinnamon bear in Yellowstone park a good squeeze around the neck. The bear, however, much to the relief of Miss Wells's companion, did not reciprocate the caress, although he seemed to enjoy it. Miss Wells is the 15-year-old daughter of a wealthy cotton dealer of Austin, Tex. She is a beauty of the true southern type, imbued with the daring spirit and nerve that so often are found in the western plains girl, and is large for her age. Mr. Cameron who came to this city a few days ago, described Miss Wells's daring escapade as follows: "Our party had stopped for the noon hour luncheon, and while the meal was being prepared Miss Wells and I started out for a pick a few berries. We had gone but a short distance when, about a hundred feet away, we saw a large cinnamon bear browsing among the bushes. Knowing that all the animals in the park are more or less tame, we approached the bear. I held up my hand, and the bear, thinking that I had something for him to eat, stood on his hind feet and reached up, but finding that he had been deceived, shook his head angrily and walked away. My young companion then ran back to the wagon, and returned with a few cookies. Again we approached the bear, and Miss Wells held one of the cookies in her hand. The bear repeated the same performance he had gone through with me, but this time he found something. Miss Wells gradually drew back her hand while the bear was reaching for it, until the animal's head was over her shoulder, and then, while he was eating the cookie, she reached around his neck with her other arm and hugged him tightly. My heart seemed to stop beating, but I dared not yell, for the animal would be startled and attack the girl. When he had finished eating the cookie, however, he merely dropped down on all fours again and sauntered off into the brush. In all my experience, I have never seen a more reckless or daring and even dangerous action by a young woman.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.
