"The Steeping Beauty and the Beaut"

at the Boyd.

The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast," a Drury Lane theater speciacle, in three acts and eleven scenes; by J. Hickory Wood and Arthur Collins; music by J. M. Charles and Frederic Solomon; under discount of the second secon Glover and Frederic Solomon; under di-rection of W. E. Nankeville. The princi-pals:

King Bardout. Ralph Edwards Gueen Spadia. Charles Saunders

President Petit. Edward Marsh
Doctor Squills David DeWoif
Princes Beauty Rose Sartella
Prince Charming Isabelle Underwood
Malevolentia, a witch Edith Arnold
Benevolentia, a fairy queen Isabelle Miller

"The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast" might have been a great spectacle at the Drury Lane theater, London; indeed, it must have been, for it had a long and notably successful career there, as it did later in New York. But Omaha is a long way from either London or New York, and e spectacle has shrunken so in its delayed transmission that it is hardly more than a ghost of the original show. It still has its points of interest, and the company which presented it at the Boyd yes terday does its best to give life to the

Barney Bernard, who joined the company yesterday, redeems the comedy end of the performance, in the part of Lena His delivery of the lines in which Joe Cawthorne once delighted is unctuous and full of a natural humor that is irresistible. He has long been known as one of the best in his line on the vaudeville stage. and he comes to the new work full of zeal, benefit of which his auditors last night had. In contrast with the work of Bernard is that of Edwards and Saunders, as the king and queen. They try very hard to get the fun out of the lines set down for the king and queen, but with indifferent suc-

Isabelle Underwood saves the show in the singing line. She has a magnificent contraito voice and utilizes it fully, having three splendid solos. All the way, from the lower to the upper registers, her fine voice rings true, and the enthusiastic recalls she received were richly deserved Miss Edith Arnold sings an interpolated song with good effect. The chorus singing is good, but the body is hardly numerous enough to make the spectacular features of the piece very imposing. "The Sleeping Beauty and the Reast"

will be offered again this evening and on Tuesday evening.

Vaudeville at the Creighton-Orpheum. Art, genuine and unmistakable, is having an inning at the Orpheum this week. One is loth to speak of the Fadette orchestra as an "act," for it deserves a better appellation. It is a distinct and notable departure from the ordinary and its reception by the Sunday assemolages at the Orpheum indicate the accuracy of a long cherished belief that people who seek things above the usual run of "turns," Twenty-one young women, each an artist, under the direction of Madam Caroline B. It is not the light and frothy "popular" music and has not a vestige of ragtime. but all worthy of genuine artistic endegvor and produced with such effect of tone and tempo as to fairly enthuse even the most sluggish. Madam Nichols conducts with a firm confidence and an easy grace, securing positive and satisfactory results and producing the utmost from the instruments under her control. The precision of movement is noticeable throughout, and the careful phrasing and shading of the tone effects is a striking quality of the orchestra's work. The violins, eight in number, dominate the ensemble, but the who presides over the slide trombone is sanctioned by the crown. an artist, indeed, her mellow notes beings such as even a Pryor might not disown, LECTURE ON SPIRITUALISM while the cornetist and the bassoonist understand their instruments thoroughly. "What Happened to Jones" is a typical Broadhurst farce that, when properly presented, is bound to have very laughable results. The Woodward stock company gives a very good production and the big Sunday audiences were delighted. Mr Morrison does, perhaps, his best work of the season so far, as Jones. The fun he makes is genuine, and he adds to an already firmly established reputation as a comedian. Miss Lang gives a new touch to her work-that of comedy resulting from rather more intimate knowledge of the world than usually is accredited to gently bred young women. Her work is interesting and successful.

Mr. Schofield is the professor of anatomy and an exceedingly funny one. Miss Marie Hudson scores a decided hit as Helma, a Swedish servant. Mr. Owen plays the part of the bishop, one of almost incomprehensible misery, which is turned into comic because the audience knows everything is all right and in the end will be sealed by the inevitable Burwood kiss- does believe in a great social, economical which in fact is the case. Frank Weed takes the lead as "Germany" and also furnishes a large share of the humor. W. B. Miss Vera Hamilton as the blind mother, Catherine Crego as Reddy and Eva Lewis as Mrs. Hastings take their parts satisfactorily The third act brings in a scene on the Chicago river, showing a lake steamer passing through one of the jack-knife style of bridges, and is very realistic. Many opportunities are created for dramatic scenes and utterances and all of them are taken advantage of to the greatest extent.

TISZA AND APPONYI JOIN Hungary Now Presents United Front in Opposition to Aggression of Ruler.

VIENNA, Jan. 14.-(Special Cablegram to The Bee.)-The universal suffrage bill proposes to enfranchise all male citizens above 24 years of age who can read and write Magyar. Present electors, if unable to read and write, will retain the franchise during the next two elections. Candidates for election must have been Hungarian citizens for at least ten years and must be able to express themselves in Magyar. Voting is secret, and at least one polling station must be erected in every large village or center of population.

Twelve months ago Count Stephen Tieza had to battle for hours against the invective and uproar of the coalition deputies before he was able to obtain a hearing. But today for the first time-except perhaps when in the early days of his premiership he classified the opinions of the Austrian premier on Hungarian law as those of a listinguished foreigner-he commands the applause and the support of the entire left ever since he has announced-his determination to support the resolutions of protest introduced by Count Apponyl.

Count Apponyi, in explaining his resolutions of protest, said that he had had no difficulty in proving the illegality of prorogation before the estimates had been or could be voted. He believed the laws were clear upon this point. He refrained from extreme deductions, however, in order "not to snap the threads of an understanding with the crown." His resolution states that the house "only accepts and bows to the royal rescript because it is anxious not to create a situation such as would render extremely difficult any constitutional contact with the crown in the future." The resolution, however, gives formal notice that "the present attitude of the chamber, inspired by careful consideration of national interests, must not be misinterpreted in a manner decogatory to the binding power of the law."

Count Tisza says that though he and his party disagree with some of Count Apponyl's observations and with some features of the resolution, they are going to support it. The "systematic prorogations," says, "reduce parliamentarism to a their amusement there would appreciate fiction. The present proporgation infringes not only our constitution, but the very principles of constitutionality and also our

The liberal leader added that in view of the illegal conduct of the government the house was justified in departing from the normal practice of avoiding debate upon rescript of prorogation. Much might be said concerning the dangers involved for the nation and for the dynasty, but in the present circumstances it was the highest duty of all legislative factors-that is the Parliament and the king-to rise above minor views and obstacles in order to seek and find a pacific solution such as the nation could accept with tranquillity and such as to offer a remedy for the present

Slow Progress in Greene Case.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 14.—The case of Benjamin D. Greene and John F. Gaynor in the federal court tomorrow will enter upon its second week. It is expected that by Tuesday or Wednesday the case will reach a stage where a jury may be drawn. It is believed that there is but one point left that can be raised before the case comes to actual trial. This will be upon demurrers to the indictments found last November charging embezzlement and receiving funds of the United States government known to have been embezzled.

any a new cars are received here on a saturday, but the number is always so small that there is practically no market and that was the case today.

While the receipts of cattle this veek have shown large gams over fast werk they have not been excessive and chay about on a par with the run for the corresponding week of last year.

The week started out with a strong and the market, but prices were often and the 47,000 of the week the market on beef steers is 182,000 not materially different from what it was 11,000 at the close of the previous week.

Cows and helfers experienced just about Cows and neiters experienced just about the same ups and downs as the steer mar-ket, prices being weak in the imidic and strong at both ends. There has been a good consuming demains at the week and, on most days the market has been in fair on most days the market has been in fair shape.

Stockers and feeders have been in fair supply all the week considering the scason of the year. At the same time there has been a very good buying demand from the country which means that the market has been in a good healthy condition all the week. The trace has been active every day and prices strong, so that there have been no great changes during the week.

HOGS—There was only a moderate run of nogs at this point this morning, but other seling points had a great pienty and were generally lower. As the market has been very high here for several days as compared with other seling points packers were very much inclined to take off when they saw lower reports from other markets. This resulted in the trade opening slow and weak to be lower. The movement of hogs toward the scales was very slow at first and it was late before very much business was transacted. Tovery much business was transacted. To-ward the close it became evident that the demand was really better than was ap-parent at first, and the trade became more active at stronger prices. The market as a whole was no more than a shade lower on an average than yesterday. Shippers will note that nogs at this point are now selling practically at Chicago prices. Some of the packing house buyers received dispatches from their Chicago houses today indicating that the cust of their droves here was within 1 or 2 cents of the cost of their chicago droves.

The hog market this week has been in a very satisfactory condition as viewed from a seller's standpoint. The week satisfactory very satisfactory condition as viewed from a selier's standpoint. The week started out with a sharp advance, but fell off a little on Monday and Tuesday. On Thursday a reaction set in, the market bains a little stronger that day, while on Friday there was a gain of bc. The easing off of prices at the close of the week left the market just about where it was on alonday or lice nigher than the close of the previous week.

Representative sales.

StiEEP-This has been a week of large receipts, the total being far in excess of the previous week and the corresponding week of a year ago. This has been true not only of the receipts at this market point, but of a year ago. This has been frue not only of the receipts at this market point, but of practically all others. In consequence of the large runs packers have been filled full and have been unable to force the mutton into consumption as fast as the sheep and lambs have been coming forward. The week started out with the feeling somewhat casy but on Tuesday there was a very active and strong market at this point. Buyers seemed to be hungry for supplies and they shapped up everything in sight without hesitation. On Wednesday the effects of the large receipts began to be seen, as huyers appeared less anxious for supplies, and the close of the market was weak. The big break came on Thursday, when values at this point were quoted 15675c lower, and this was followed by a still lower market Friday. The average decidence reported at other selling points was fully as much and in many cases a good deal more. As has been noted before in these col-

As has been noted before in these col-umns, the general situation as regards the sheep and lamb market is far from dis-couraging. On the contrary, there is every reason for believing that the break this week is only temporary and that the hold-ing back of shipments a few days, so as to give packers a chance to clean out their coolers, will restore the former strength of the market. It is some time between now and the coming of grass sheep and feeders can afford to take their time and not rush their sheep and lambs to marfeeders can afford to take their time and not rush their sheep and lambs to market any faster than packers can take care of them to good advantage.
