Dr. Douglas Hyde, president of the Gaelic League of Ireland and looked upon as the foremost individual in the effort to regenerate the material and intellectual side of that country from the inside, arrived in Omaha Tuesday morning. He will lecture at the Boyd theater Thursday night under the auspices of the most prominent Irish-Americans of Omaha.

Dr. Hyde is accompanied on his tour of the United States by his wife. They are quartered at the Hotel Grand.

The doctor gave proof of his versatility before submitting to an interview by showing how a safety match can be ignited if the customary prepared paper is not handy. This was not a special exhibition; it occurred during the process of lighting.

Dr. Hyde explained immediately that the revival of the Gaelic language sought by the league was merely the medium or leverage by which it is hoped to build a spirit of national self-reliance and self-respect instead of "poor second-hand English imitations."

HIS GOSPEL IS POPULAR.

He said:

"After speaking in about forty American cities I find Irish-Americans are taking to the doctrine I am preaching with wonderful ardor. It was necessary only to bring our teachings before the Irish in the United States to win their most cordial support and sympathy. I have been amazed to hear not one word of disagreement. My mission to America is to explain to my countrymen here the work we are doing at home and to ask their co-operation. They have not been negligently giving it.

"A knowledge of what is being done at home to make Ireland a self-respecting nation will have a powerful influence upon the Irish here, towns making them more valuable citizens of the United States. The Gaelic League is bringing to the attention the great deeds of Ireland in the past; her contributions to literature add to the civilization of mankind, and it is necessary America should know these things also.

MAJORITY RISING WELL.

"I think the Irish race in this country is setting on as well as could be expected. The bulk of our people came here in a starving condition after the great famine of 1847-48 and were forced to take employment in mental capacities. Their sons and often themselves moved forward to better things. In going through the New England states I found that, as a rule, our countrymen had almost full control of the press and of political appointments and far more than their share of the judiciary and of the medical profession.

"It is an anomaly to have English history taught in your schools and not Irish history, considering the fact that the Irish are infinitely more important as a factor in the life of almost every town in America than are the English.

"The constitution of the Gaelic league is absolutely nonpolitical and nonsectarian. People of all politics, United Irish Leaguers, the Clan-Na-Gael and the Sinn-Féin men are all united, as well as the conservatives and the protestants, upon our platform. We have met with no opposition from the clergy.

SOBRIETY AND INDUSTRY.

"We are attempting to recreate a self-respecting, sober Ireland, an Ireland of good citizens, which shall develop along its own lines that come naturally and instinctively to it; an Ireland that shall support its own industries, write its own books and speak its own language. We do not propose to cease using the English language, for it is a commercial necessity, but Irish is a national necessity.

"I had the honor of dining with President Roosevelt and was very much impressed by his charm of manner, his gracefulness and his amazing knowledge of Irish literature. I never knew what publicanism meant until I met the president. He seemed to understand the work of the Gaelic League by instinct, and I feel quite certain he thoroughly sympathized with it. He spoke a great deal about Irish saga and the ancient Irish epic. He struck me as being a scholar of the very broadest sympathies."
