are unable to unite upon the candidacy will be more general than specific on the Slocumb law proposition. The man they think they will nominate has not yet been named in this campaign. The Dahlman centingent, it is understood, is keenly disappointed not to receive the full strength Mr. Smith's support since he has gone out of the race, but the Smith faction seems just as determined as the others are disappointed not to let their followers go astray by Joining Dahlman. And still the

To his friends Mr. Smith Saturday issued this statement:

this statement:

After very careful consideration I have reached a definite conclusion that I should not become a candidate for the nomination for mayor. In reaching this conclusion I am actuated very largely by selfish motives. To be elected to that office and accomplish the things I would hope to accomplish the things I would hope to accomplish if I filled the office, would necessarily demand my entre time and attention. I do not feel that I can possibly afford to quit my business or neglect it, as I would necessarily have to do if I should be chosen to fill that office.

The only regret I have in the matter is that it may possibly be some disappointment to those of my friends who have been so carnest and enthusiastic in my support. I want to take this occasion to thank you very carnestly for all you have done and said in my behalf and assure you that the loyal support guaranteed to me by many of my friends has been worth more to me than I am able to express.

I fully realize that this step means the abandonment on my part of any political aspirations, but the advice to the shoemaker to stick to his last was good advice, and I have concluded to apply it to myself.

Reference to Mr. Smith's statement that he cannot afford to make the race, it is pointed out he has been attorney for the Updike Grain company for a number of years. Recently this firm has greatly increased its business. The report is that in order to keep Mr. Smith as its attorney and out of the mayoralty contest the grain company raised his yearly allowance to more than the emoluments of the executive chair.

The news that Mr. Smith would not run was forced by a number of democrats who interviewed Mr. Smith and insisted that he file his primary certificate at once and give them an opportunity to get out and do effective campaigning. Backed into a number of his followers received personal formally announcing the with-

Speculation as to Smith's successor before the democratic primaries, and it is regarded as well as settled that he will have a successor, is rather vague and indefinite As a matter of fact, it is clear no man has been decided upon by the Jacksonian club leaders and the younger element of the local democracy. Certain interests are still laboring with James P. English and others are talking Frank Ransom, but the knowing ones say the choice will be a new man

Edward Whalen, a venerable socialist, has filed a certificate for the city clerk demanding that his name be placed on the ballot of his party for the position of "alderman" from the Eighth ward. Presumably Mr. Whalen mean "councilman," as such things as "aldermen" are not known in Omaha. Other filings listed are William Neckel, councilman Second ward, republican; George M. Baier, councilman, Seventh ward, republican; Thomas McGovern, councilman Ninth ward, democrat; S. P. Sorenson, councilman Tenth ward, so-

The patent medicine fixers in the Fontanelle club are worried about the matter of a platform. One thing the braves have always insisted upon is a high and mighty sounding platform. No campaign since they organized has been complete without one. In this battle they have endorsed a let of candidates and left the platform business lie over until afterwards. Since they were endorsed the candidates have held several meetings and a marked antipathy to any platform has been developed among a number of them. These argue that there is no necessity for such an encumbrance. On the other hand, more esthetic braves, not on the endorsement list, say it would be a coldblooded admissible to the such as the search of the such as the such they organized has been complete without

VERY serious Sickness has a small beginning. And, in nine cases out of ten that small beginning is made in the Bowels.

Indigestion is the beginning of most diseases:

It paves the way for all others. Lack of exercise, hasty eating, improper food, are its first causes.

Laziness, and postponement, permits it to grow into Chronic Constipation, which means life-long Discomfort.

It isn't necessary to be sick-g-bed, you know, in order to be mighty uncomfortable.

Even slight indigestion affects the nerves, dulls the mind, and obscures the merry sunshine of Life. And, Indigestion once started, grows

And, the time to adjust the watch is not when it has run down, nor when the main spring is broken, but at the very minute adjustment is discovered necessary.

The time to adjust the Bowels is not merely when your Head Aches, when your Liver is Sick, your Stomach in Revolt, and Nature's Food Process retarded for 24 hours or longer.

Revision of Registration Lists.

There was little excitement in the polling places yesterday during the revision of registration. There was no evidence of wholesale stuffing of the registration lists as was prophested by certain candidates within the last week. It was declared that twenty or more voters of Council Bluffs would be repeated in the different wards, so that the candidate could vote that many votes at the pri maries. As a precautionary measure a police officer was stationed in each polling clean politics are said to be busy getting place with orders to watch every voter prosecution. OUR LETTER BOX

Windmill Fuel.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Feb. 9,-To the Editor of The Bee: In view of the publications going the rounds of the various papers in the United States that all the coal miners are anticipating going on a strike on April 1 next, I desire to place before the many readers of your valuable paper the following propositions, to enable them to meet this emergency of the possibility of shortening of the fuel question, especially in the state of Nebraska; that is to say, a process of procuring heat and light without the means of fuel of any kind whatsoever. To do so I will quote from articles published with this object in view, one from the New Century Path of Point Loma, San Diego, Cal., and one from the Popular Mechanics' Magazine of

Chicago:

Windmills On Board Ship—A novel use of windmills was made on board the exploring ship Arctic. To save fuel, all of which must be carried, a set of windmills were erected when the ship became ice-bound. The power was employed in compressing air, which was used to run a generator and charge storage batteries for lighting the ship. The system was sufficiently successful to warrant the American Ship Builder in recommending the adoption of windmills on board the lightships, which serve as floating lighthouses along our coast.

ship Builder in recommending the tightships, which serve as floating lighthouses along our coast.

These vessels are where they are subject to aimost continuous winds from some direction, and it is believed would make enough current, not only to light their signal lamps, but sufficient to cook with and possibly warm the ship in winter. The suggestion is made that the experiment be given a thorough trial, not only on the lightships, but with lighthouses also, which are usually in exposed locations.

The town of Wittkeil, in Schieswig, is lighted by electricity generated by the motion of a windmill. Of course, it is a very large one, the wing area being about 1,000 square feet. The Danish government, says the Scientific American, has been experimenting for several years in this direction, and some definite results have been reached. It has been found, for instance, that a curved wing surface develops twice as much power as a flat one; that four wings make the most satisfactory arrangement; that the width of the wing should be about one-fourth of the length, and that the greatest width carried in front should be three times the narrowest width.

In view of the variability of the wind some method must be adopted of storing the energy developed. It may be an once turned into electricity and directed into storage batteries. Or it may be made to compress air or to carry water to a height. All of these are, of course, expensive at their installation. After that the only points to be considered are the expense of watching, working and keeping them in repair. A storage battery, watched by an electrical expert, would seem to be the simplest.

There are now on the market, and in use in many places, a list of electrical radiators and they sell as cheap as the ordinary steam or hot water radiator. Mr. Edison, writing to me on the subject states that the only way to get power without fuel is by the use of windmill dynamos and storage batteries. And he expects to have completed a new improved storage battery in the spring, and would suggest in lieu of storage batteries extra tanks of compressed air to be kept on hand so as to meet any variation in the force of the wind. The above is simply extended as a suggestion to the readers of your paper in procuring heat and light in a state like ours, where all fuel in the shape of coal has to be imported.
