sengers of Sleep in Search for Fugitive.

"Here, here, get out of this; who are you? Let us take a good look at you; wake up there, you!" Such greetings as there were hurled by forty policemen at the sleeping or sleepy passengers on train No. 71 of the Minneapolis & Omaha on its arrival early this morning in Sloux City. The passengers looked up and took notice for one thing and for another they uttered certain words bearing in an indirect way upon the personnel and characteristics of the Sloux City police department. According to Henry E. Warner, advance agent for Sarah Bernhardt, the policemen produced a pandemonlum and left a riot of wrath in their wake. Mr. Warner, who was on the train enroute to Omaha, said: "The police were after a man named Clemens. Certainly he could have been nothing short of a murderer, because I couldn't conceive the thought that the search for any less a dastard would call forth such an army of police and such a hurricane of excitement. The police, however, in their haste to find the demon, omitted to say what he had done. All they seemed bent on was capturing him, dead or alive. Why, you never saw such an upteaval in so short a time in your life. The train had scarcely come to a standstill those of us in the Pullman cars who were asleep were aroused by the gruff

JUST UP FROM OLD CASS-WAY Two Plattsmouth Youths Are Picked Up by Police in Big City.

William and Samuel Lindsay, two Plattsmouth youths picked up here a few days ago as suspicious characters, were arraigned Friday morning before Police Judge Crawford on a charge of vagrancy. to which they promptly pleaded not guilty. While giving an account of their stewurdships in the Cass county metropolls the Lindsay brothers accused the Plattsmouth chief of police of inveigling them out of $3 and then ordering them out of town. They said they promised to leave town and cast their lot in a real community, which they explained meant Omaha. On arrival at Omaha a Plattsmouth officer tipped the Lindsays off to the Omaha police , so the local police records show. The Lindsay brothers were discharged by the police judge.
