Now, if the evidence shows that the de-fendant had no interest in the Portland prior to March, 1892, and that the plaintiff then agreed to, or did, trade or exchange with the defendant, grubbs claim, this would be so inconsistent with the plaintiff the sclaim that he and the defendant en-ing that event you would not be justi-tied in finding that said February 2 con-tract was made between the partles, and in that event your verdict should be for the defendant. Almost Reach the Outside Before They Are Discovered.

A second attempt on the part of some of his wards to saw their way to liberty was frustrated yesterday morning by County Jailer Gallup. The prisoners implicated had succeeded in sawing half way through one of the bars of an outer window on the south side of the building when discovered.

Charles Stevenson and Charles Lloyd, ander indictment for robbing two pawnbrokers; Arthur Levi, under joint indictment with Pat Crowe on the charge of holding up two motor crews last July, and James Arthur, awaiting his second trial for alleged complicity in the attempt to rob the Treynor bank, were the prisoners confined on the third floor where the at tempt was made. Charles Stevenson, who was the ringleader in the former recent attempt to break jall, admitted yesterday that he planned the attempt to saw through the outer window. Arthur, in the opinion of Jailer Gallup and Sheriff Caning, was not implicated. With the steel spring or "shank" from ne of his shoes Stevenson succeeded in nanufacturing a small saw, the handle of which was made of two pieces of kindling wood tied together with twine. With this improvised tool Stevenson managed to saw through the bolt of the padlock on the door leading into the outer corridor. Once in the outer corridor access to the outer window on the south side was easy and Stevenson and his accomplices met with little difficulty in sawing through the iron bar and were half way through with the job when discovered by Jailer Gallup. A few minutes longer and they would have had the bar sawed through. The drop from this window to the grass plot below would have been less than twenty feet. Stevenson made no denial of the fact that he planned the attempted jail break. He has already served three terms in the state prison and he realizes that if convicted this time he may be sent up under the habitual criminal act, which will probably mean a twenty-year sentence. On the occasion of the former attempted jail break Arthur is said to have tried to dissuade his fellow prisoners from attempting it and this leads the sheriff and Jailer Gallup to believe that he had no hand in yesterday's attempt.

I ob-served the jury closely, I was among them at every recess and morning, noon and night. I am not without experience in such matters. And I do not believe that any of the jury could have been under the in-fluence of intoxicating liquors while in the jury box without my knowing it. I regret very much that the jurors have been subjected to such severe criticism as has been made in this case, as I believe that all of these criticisms as to their moral conduct are without merit. I be-lieve, on the whole, the jury were above the accurage in character and ability.
