The deputies numbered 203. In April, 1873, a radical change of principle was effected by severing the estate management. The interest is more provincial Diets and by constituting four categories of reichsrath electors. These categories were: First, the big landlords; second, the cities; third, the chambers of emmerce and industry, and fourth, the rural communes. To each category a certain number of seats or legislative mandates were assigned. The number of deputies was increased to 353. In 1892 the franchise in all the cities and rural communes was extended to all male citizens assessed at $2 for direct taxation. In 1896 Count Badeni reduced this qualification to $1.50 when carrying out his great franchise reform. He held fast to the category or curia system, but created a curia of universal suffrage, to which he assigned seventy-two new seats. This expedient introduced the principle of universal suffrage, but allowed it to affect barely one-sixth of the chamber and checked its operation by allowing all the voters of the other categories to vote ever again in the category of universal

The Christian socialists are displeased on account of the distribution in Vienna, where, after many years, the German liberals have again a prospect of winning seats. They also disapprove of the clause allowing a vote after one year's continued residence. Further grounds of discontent among the Christian socialists are governmenti provisions in the bill ordering stricter coutrol over the elections and also an exact BRITISH BOYCOTT AT END

The newspapers, commenting upon the bill, say that its most interesting feature is that it marks another great step in the transformation of the Austrian empire from a German to a Slav state.

DUBLIN, March 17 .- (Special Cablegram o The Bee.))-The relations between the to be in a condition at the present time where they are creditable to both. The Irish party has often been aspersed by its pponents, but though much maligned, any thoughtful person who looks into the subject must admit that of all parties that were or are in the House of Commons the Irish are the most self-denying. By a selfdenying ordinance they bar themselves out of all places of emolument under the government. They even forswear the suggesting of others for posts. They ask from their own people, not reward but support. That their services are not entirely unappreclated is demonstrated by the fact that the country has always tried to make fair provisions for their support, for, as is well known, a member of the House of Comnons receives no salary. This year the response promises to be more generous than ever before, and it is expected that

"On the north side of a court, over the enclosure of the old temple, we have just found remains of a shrine of the eighteenth dynasty of the great king Thotmes III. This building, made of big blocks of sandstone, did not cover a very large area. A first encouragement was a fine statue of a scribe who lived at the end of the nineteenth dynasty. As this statue was quite perfect it seemed to us that it could not be alone. In this respect our hopes were deceived; we found no other statues, but suddenly the removal of a few stones revealed to us a chapel covered with sculptures, the colors of which are absolutely fresh. It is about ten feet logg and five feet wide. The roof is vaulted, painted in blue with yellow stars. NEW YORK, March 17 .- The Herald tomorrow will say that it became known in Wall street yesterday that Lyman J. Gage, former secretary of the treasury, has decided to resign as president of the United States Trust company, to which position he was elected after his resignation from President McKinley's cabinet a few years ago. The cause of his resignation is failing health.

Mr. Gage was president of the First National bank of Chicago prior to entering President McKinley's cabinet as secretary of the treasury. When he left Washington he decided to make his home in New York and accepted the presidency of the United States Trust company. For the last five years he has been the directing head of the institution.

Recently he has on more than one occasion expressed a wish to his fellow directors to be relieved of his duties.

Sentiment Expressed at Hearing News Generally in Favor of the Result Reached by the Trial Jury.

After deliberating less than three hours, the jury in the O'Hearn murder case brought in a verdict at 7 o'clock last night finding him guilty of the murder of Nels Lausten on the night of January 20 and fixing the penalty at death. Every precaution was taken by the authorities to preven♥ a demonstration, and when the verdict was read only O'Hearn, his guards and the court officials were present. The outer doors of the courthouse were locked, and no one was admitted until after O'Hearn had been escorted to a cab, which was in waiting on the west side of the courthouse. O'Hearn took the verdict with the same stolid indifference that marked his conduct throughout the trial. His nerve did not lesert him even while the verdict of death was being read, and while he kept his gaze the fatal words were spoken by Clerk Broadwell, who read the verdict. His young wife, who sat with him throughout the trial, was not present when the verdict was read. She tried to get in at the south door of the courthouse, but it was locked and she was not admitted. She then went around the building to try another door, and while she was gone the officers took her husband out of the door and down the driveway to where the cab was waiting. Mrs. O'Hearn went around to the north door again after the cab had been driven away. She did not see her husband. She went up stairs to Judge Sutton's court room and learned the verdict. She was sobbing convulsively as she went down stairs and left the building clones O'Hearn's mother, who was a constant attendant at the trial, went home at 5 o'clock

While the formality of handing in the verdict was going on he fixed his eyes on the jury and glanced from them to District Clerk Broadwell, who read the verdict. Not the slightest trace of emotion was visible on his face. After the verdict was read, Mr. English demanded a poll of the jurors. As each juryman was asked the question whether or not the verdict read was his verdict, O'Hearn carefully scrutinized the juror's face. Judge Sutton then thanked the jury for its service and the court adjourned, the entire proceeding taking less than ten minutes. O'Hearn, surrounded by policemen was taken out of the south door of the court house to the cab which was waiting SUICIDE AT ZION CITY, ILL. and was driven away. He was later taken under direction of Judge Sutton to Lincoln, where he will be confined in the fenitentiary until the time comes to argue the motion for a new trial. He was accontpanied by Sheriff McDonald and Deputy Hage. While the jury was deliberating O'Hearn was in his cell at the county jail, where he was taken as soon as it was found an immediate verdict would not be returned. Here he did not show any trace of feeling, and, as usual, did not talk much to those about him. He ate a hearty supper be fore going back to the court house, and the fact a jury was then deliberating on whether or not to hang him did not appear to affect his appetite in the least.

Time for Any Motions. The defense has three days in which to make this motion and will be given forty days from the end of the present term to prepare a bill of exceptions and file it in the supreme court.
