her women friends may admire her, but it is the rare man whose sense of beauty is developed so that he wants to marry her. He thinks she is great on the golf links, he is less attentive when it comes to filling out her dance program, and he is still more shy at the altar.

Introduce one of these amazons to your brother or to the friend whom you would like to have take a fancy to her and you will have the verdict of the ordinary sized and commonplace man. "She's a fine girl, but she's too big for me," he will say, unless he is a big, strapping athlete himself.

As a matter of fact, the tall girl is not in demand except for occasions of show and when a man wants a "stunning" companion or a good fellow. He don't want her as a wife-she is not wanted in business, and she is at a discount almost anywhere. On the contrary, the little woman who is overdeveloped mentally for her lord has succeeded in capturing because her small size has kept him from suspecting her intelectuality. There is many a girl with a brilliant mind and brilliantly educated who would scare away the man who marries her if it were not for the fact that her brains do not show because of her being little, and with the atractive ways which little women have of looking up at men who are bigger than they are. She appeals to his physical weakness and the dread that she may one day wind him around her finger never occurs to him.

The small girl is in the ascendant. Outshone in the athletic field and eclipsed in public gatherings by her tall and queenly sister, she is victor in matrimony, and entertains in her own home for her superbly tall bachelor girl friend.

Club Women Hire Tutors.

New York club women, for all their superlative brand of brains, often feel that they don't make deep impressions upon the minds of the audiences which they address, which feeling is almost as irritating to the nerves as not being able to talk at all. Consequently, says the New York Mail, they have begun to hie them to the elocutionists, who take them in hand and tell them how to deliver effectively the address which they have learned by heart, and how to hurl the telling points at the bonnets in a way to cause certain enthusiasm. Several elecutionists in town are making quite a good income by giving their critical judgment to club women. Of course these teachers are sworn to secrecy, but they generally manage to drop a consoling hint to each individual that there are many others in the same business.

who, with his wife, had been there for ten years and who had managed to reduce considerably the death rate from intertribal quarrels, says a Sydney correspondent of the Chicago Daily News. He appears to have been another Tamate, as Chambers was universally called by the natives of New Guinea, with a perfect gentus for going unarmed among the flercest cannibal tribes and soothing the intertribal differences which, but for his the employment of a substitute for more presence, would undoubtedly have led to than a few days each month. On one occasion 100 savages in full war paint, armed with guns and poisoned arrows, surrounded Mr. Boyd's house and threatened to kill him because a certain sacred weapon had been pulled out of a tree and bad weather had ensued. The missionary, we are told, "walked out into the middle of the hideous company and told then that he had nothing to do with the question. They listened to him and were onvinced, and went peaceably away."

The description given by Miss Grimshaw of the tollet of one of these interesting cannibals made up for a dance is as follows: His head dress was "a very neat arrangement in powdered white wood ash, giving him an extraordinary resemblance to a Sydney barrister." Miss Grimshaw seems to have ingratiated herself with the natives, some of whom had never seen a white woman before.
