be raised under the new demands by 51.5 cents a ton. The general public asks: "Why would not the addition of 51.5 cents to the man-ket price regain the entire extra outlay." This question ignores one of the important awards of the Rossevelt arbitration-the sliding scale. According to the sliding scale the present flat rate of wages must be paid for every ton of coal sold at tide-water for 34.50. It will be understood that the miners' wages increase with every ad-vance in the market price, but the oper-ator must secure a sufficient net increase to equalize the increase paid to the miner. This equalization is reached, according to the figures of the Lehigh Valley Coal com-pany, at about $1.20.
