Good Endorsements of a Good Man by Those Who Know Him

LETTERS OF ENDORSEMENT. LETTERS OF ENDORSEMENT.
To the Voters of the City of Omaha:
As we are about to select councilmen to serve for the next three years, it gives me great pleasure to speak a good word for denry I. Plumb, candidate from the Third ward. He is at present manager of the Chatham Apartment Holei, lately erected by Sir Horace Plunkett, whose Omaha estate I represent. Mr. Plumb is a man of your business qualifications, and trustworthy and homorable in every respect, and I would be pleased if all my friends would use their influence for his election. Respectfully, H. J. WINDSOR.

Mr. Plumb has received the endorsement of the Fontenelle club and stands with them in their effort for good government.

ganization Because Born for Definite Work and Fulfills Its Mission.

Saturday afternoon on the occasion of the laying of the cornerstone of the new Young Men's Christian association building at the southwest corner of Harney and Seventeenth streets. A throng was present to witness the ceremonies, which were carried out on an improvised platform. I. W. Carpenter, president of the association. gram opened with a song, "I Will Life Up Mine Eyes," by the Kountze Male quartet, consisting of R. J. Spoerri, C. P. Daniels, E. N. Bovell and A. L. Dick, Rev. D. E. which Howard H. Baldrige, chairman of the citizens' committee, delivered the ora-

President Carpenter placed the stone in position, making an address in which he described the work of the association and told the story of the building evolution.

Oration of Baldrige. In his oration Mr. Baidrige said:

Recently, I believe, the association has more comprehensively grasped what ought to be its methods, means and mission.

It is a permanent organization, because it was born for a definite and permanent work. It is not an ephemeral or fast passing institution, for it deals with that which is permanent in men. It is here to stay because it has work to do. It is not here to do the work of the church or the home, nor to supplain the church and the home. It is anchiary and supplementary and not antagonistic to these. It deals with the whole man in his three-fold powers. It touches the physical, mental and moral nature. Its business is to develop the whole man, the complex faculties of the mind; to train them for definite specialized work; to develop the physical man and give him a strong, healthy body; to elevate the soul, and to surcharge it with aspirations for a higher and better life.

Its business is to encourage growth and furnish the momentum for. In his pration Mr. Baldrige said:

aspirations for a higher and better life. Its business is to encourage growth and furnish the opportunity for it.

The law of growth is the law of life. No life is stationary. Every day is a day of deterioration. We elther know more today than we did yesterday or we know less. We are either better today than yesterday or we are worse. Hence the need of 'well directed meatal, physical and spiritual activity. We are ike an engine on an up-grade plane-we must either go forward or we will go backward. It is so easy for men to let themselves slide down grade. It requires no effort. The movement seems involuntary. Just turn off the steam and release the brake and they will soon be at the bottom. Persistent effort is the only thing that counts in life. If the young man drops the oar he may pleasantly drift for awhite on the placid see of life but he is any tom. Persistent effort is the only thing that counts in life. If the young man drops the oar he may pleasantly drift for awhile on the placid sea of life, but he is sure to land on the shouls and the bars. He must have the stimulus for exertion. It is found in the association of other well directed young men. He must have the place and the opportunity for growth and development. It will be found here, in the beautiful building you are about to erect. It will add much to the worth of the city. We have false ideas of worth. A man's worth consists not so much in what he has, but in what he is. We ought not to measure the greatness of a city so much by the beauty of its streets, the magnificence of its business enterprises, as by the character of its citizenship. Whatever makes for the character of its citizens makes for the greatness of the city. To the state, as to the individual, morals are more than money and principles more than price, and this building will stand for the morals and the manhood of this city. It must not be a school to breed a weak, boneless, namby-pamby type of Christianity, nor of a wild and unreasonable fanaticism, but a strong virile flesh and blood type of exalted young manhood. It must not be a sectarian temple. It must be open be a sectarian temple. It must be open to all creeds and denominations. Jew and Gentile, Catholic and Protestant, must be equally welcome to its portals and its privileges. It must be broad and catholic in its endeavor and comprehensive in the sphere of its influence. Its constant alm and ultimate purpose are and must be to make man better physically, mentally, morally. To this end have you wrought. To this end have the people of Omaha generously contributed to your plans. To this end will this structure be erected and dedicated.

this end will this structure be erected and dedicated.

The people of Omaha have given liberally of their substance to this building. They have a faculty of arising to the occasion and meeting every public obligation as they have met this one. They have almost shown a genius for giving. They could not make a better public investment. We recognize their liberality and their openhanded benevolence which will make this building possible.
