"Such is the answer of religion. The higher the form of Christianity the more religion is taken into account. The root of religion is individual fellowship with God. Prayer is thinking about God, reasoning about God and resting in His power. "Bome of the reasons for prayer are that man has an instinct for prayer; the entire reasonableness of prayer; the instinct for prayer is sustained by the reasonableness of prayer and the experiences of saints and Christians for ages.

"He who prays does not pray to nature, but to the God of nature. The saddest thing in this world is to find people despair because of some wrongdoing when they might find certain relief in prayer. Pray every day and surrender your personality to the care of God."

DISTURBING FACTOR IN SOCIETY

Human Progress. "Christianity as a Disturbing Factor in Human Society" was the topic of the sermon by Rev. A. S. C. Clarke at the Lowe Avenue Presbyterian church yesterday morning. In part he said:

'Christ was a disturbing factor in His country, and His followers have been disturbing factors in the world over since. Neighbor has been alienated from neighbor. and country arrayed against country through Christianity, but the result is always good. His address had necessarily to be of a considerable technical character. Native Indian Scholar. Prof. Krishns, a native scholar of India, was the guest of the society and gave a short address upon India, and its beliefs. Prof. Krishna was not at all conventional in his remarks, and at once asserted the intellectual eminence of the Hindoo, as against the popular conception regarding the intellectuality of his race. "India," he said, "was producing the most beautiful roses 2,000 years before European civilization was dreamed of. While European and American artisans were and had made many beautiful things, yet they were not able to make a Cashmere shawl. Slavery was never known in India, and no religious war ever disturbed the peace of India. Hindustanese are a non-resistent race, and India never sent a missionary out to inflict any of its beliefs upon any other people. The conception of a God was first originated with the Malayan race, and the modern religions are derived wholly from the early Malayan bellefs. The Eng lish people are proud of their language, which, after all, is but a conglomeration words, while the Chinese, who were a civilized people 2,000 years before the Christian era, spoke in a pure language of over 120,000 words.

"On a bitterly cold night about fifteen years ago, a messenger boy, now a man of a responsible position in this city, called with a message at the home of a prominent church member, who lived next door to Mr. Moores. By chance Mr. Moores opened his front door and espled the boy standing outside, while the prominent church member was within writing an answer to the message. Mr. Moores' first impulse was to ask the boy into his house, where the little fellow was warmed and given a cup of coffee. As that boy grew to man's estate he never forgot that incident. He was one of the late mayor's best friends and admirers."
