marriage was con. season. A summated at Bristol, Va., recently, when Miss Elizabeth Clark of Maxmeadows, Wythe county, became the bride of F. M. Tate, an employe of the commissary department of the South & Western railroad of Clinchport.

The bride arrived at Bristol an hour before the wedding. Finding that she was shadowed by her mother, who was opposed to the match, she wired her lover to 24vo a curriage in readiness. But Mrs. Chark adopted similar tactics and also wired for a carriage. When the train arrived the girl left the Pullman car on the opposite side from the depot and this ler met Matthison at a private party. gave her and her lover a momentary advantage. Both carriages appeared upon the street simultaneously and a wild ride was begun by the lovers, in whose carriage was also a minister of the Central Presbyterian church. The leading carriage, running at full speed, darted here and there along the side streets in a vain endeavor to shake off the woman who pursued.

The plan was to be married in the postoffice lobby, but the accommodating minister, finding that the mother was about to overtake them, performed the ceremony in the carriage while the horses were running man (or "Ohlyesas" to give him his Sioux at a mad gallop.
