SOME NEWSPAPER BLUNDERS

Hunch of Cautious Errors for Which the Proofreader Got What Was Coming to Him. An old New York newspaper man, now turned farmer, kept a scrap book in which for years he pasted hundreds of the typographical blunders and other errors that newspaper writers, but sometimes editors, committed. A few selections from this collection are given here to show that varieties of the types and blunders which writers sometimes make when driven at top speed may be compared favorably with some of the current humor of the day. It was a New York newspaper which announced that "A long line of scorpion's feathers filed into the church" instead of "surprised fathers." A journalist once famous under the press name of "Gath" wrote a Fourth of July article, in which he told with fervid eloquence how the effete monarchies of the old world trembled in their boots when they read the immortal declaration penned by Thomas Jefferson. "Thomas weiled," he began a sentence, and next morning he wished he hadn't when he saw in cold type "Thomas reiled." A daily newspaper up the Hudson reported the speech of a Fourth of July orator who had something to say about the "flat of the Almighty." It got into the paper "the flat of the Almighty." The Winnipeg Times, on the death of a reverend gentleman, meant to say "the death of a prelate," but printed "the death of a prelate." A Cardiff newspaper, reporting the sermon of the Rev. Dr. Mellor before the Congregational union, where the derrygman spoke of "Women clothed with sanctity," by an unfortunate transposition of the "c" printed the phrase, "Women clothed with sanctity." A London paper said that Ernest Renan had occasion to telegraph across the British channel the title of a lecture he was to deliver in Westminster Abbey. The title as written by him was "The Influence of Rome on the Formation of Christianity." It was published in England as "The Influence of Rome on the Digestion of Humanity." It was in a New York paper's report of a political meeting that the word "shout" was so ludicrously misinterpreted as to make the blunder famous. "The snouts of 10,000 democrats rent the air," read the report. A local reporter wrote that Dr. Talmage closed his services with the hymn, "Nearer by God, to Thee," but the blunder was caught on the fly in the proof room and did not get into the paper. At the time of the Meeker massacre in Colorado a dispatch from the west attributed the tragedy to the farmers having "pulled down the Indians' tents and corrals." One paper put it into type as "pulled down the Indians' beets and carrots." The old-time reporter, with the howl for copy ringing in his ears, sometimes perpetrated remarkable blunders. A young Chicago news gatherer wrote of a man who had died of apoplexy: "Mr. Johnson was found reclining on the bed while his legs extended over the floor and toward the outer edge of the room." A Chicago daily found a little boy who, according to its veracious chronicler, was very dead, indeed. The words wrote: "The boy was quite dead. No efforts could resuscitate him in the least." This is quite as good as the "bull cuffed from a feuilleton in the Paris Figaro, which ran: "Not a cry did she utter nor give any sign of life, not even when her brother-in-law put his hand to her heart and said to Vague, 'She is dead.'" A steady and venerable evening journal solemnly informed its readers in a complimentary notice of the Catholic Fireside that "its stories are not of a nature to destroy the morale of the youngest child." This is what the London Globe called "an inadvertence." "By an inadvertence our recent notice of Dr. Macaulay's new book commented on the absence of illustrations as a defect. We now find, however, that it contains twelve wood cuts of much merit." The editor of a Pennsylvania country weekly began a leader with a remark that "Mr. Thomas, in his address at the convention, merely let our people know how unwell he is fit to cope with Josh Allen on the stump. He will only prove a political morsel for Allen to chew up." The rival newspaper printed the paragraph with the heading in circus placard letters, "How Unwell He is Fit."—New York Sun. See Want Ads Are Business Boosters. Still Serves Its Purpose. "Say," complained the stranger, stepping inside the drug store, "this weighing machine in front of your place is out of order." "I've got nothing to do with that machine," said the sleepy-looking young man behind the counter. "Well, somebody ought to have." "What's the matter with it anyway?" "It won't work. I dropped a penny into it just now and the indicator didn't fly around. I shook the machine and jumped up and down on the platform and still it didn't move. It's a swindle." "It took the penny all right, didn't it?" "Certainly." "Well, that's what it's for. There's nothing the matter with the machine, sir."—Chicago Tribune. Scarcely Worth Mentioning. "What's the matter, dear, you look puzzled?" said Tess, meeting Jess on the avenue. "I'm sure I lost something just now," replied Jess, "but I can't think what it was." "Probably it wasn't anything very important." "No, it wasn't. I remember now; it was that little Mr. Selfains who was walking with me."—Philadelphia Press. See Want Ads Are Business Boosters.
