FEDERAL GRAIN INSPECTION

Handsbrough of North Dakota Introduces Bill in the Senate. ACCEPTANCE OPTIONAL WITH SHIPPER. Anti-Leak Bill Killed in Conference Because of Amendment Which Made it Too Broad to Suit the House.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—(Special Telegram)—In view of the fact that Omaha is a growing grain market of the first importance it will be interesting to grain buyers as well as grain raisers in Nebraska to know that Senator Handsbrough of North Dakota has submitted an amendment to the agricultural appropriation bill appropriating $50,000 for the establishment at such points as the secretary of agriculture may agree upon of laboratories for the purpose of examining and reporting upon the nature, quality and condition of any sample or consignment of seed or grain submitted, these samples to serve as a basis for fixing definite grades. The measure is full of meaning, for it is believed it will solve the problem of grain inspection and put the American product where it belongs at the head of the grain growing sections of the world. It has been urged that federal inspection of grains would be a dangerous speculation to pursue. It is believed, however, that Handsbrough's amendment will accomplish by indirection what the not sought to be established by statutory requirement. The American shipper of grain under this amendment will not be required by law to take out a government certificate upon his shipment, but it is confidently believed he will find it to his advantage to do so in order to satisfy his foreign customers.

Anti-Leak Bill Dead

The so-called "anti-leak and anti-graft" bill, which was sent "killing" through both houses of congress since the beginning of the first session of the Fifty-ninth congress, received its solar plexus today in the house. The conference committee recommended that members of congress should be ineligible to receive honoraria or to be "leaked" in any matter affecting public interest they should go to the penitentiary. In consequence of this recommendation a successful fight was led by Mr. McCall of Massachusetts against the measure, not so much on the ground that members of congress would stigmatize themselves by putting themselves into the bill as malefactors, but that the first section covered the president, cabinet officers and heads of departments.

This bill is the outgrowth of "leaks" regarding cotton statistics and by some hook or crook the conferees thought it advisable to make members of congress amenable to the law as well as officers and agents of the government, for the moment forgetting that members of congress were directly responsible to their constituents. It took the republicans some time to decide whether they should go on record in opposition to the measure, but believing that not only they themselves might violate the law, but that from the president down to the humblest clerk dealing with statistics might technically violate the measure without any intent to do so, the republicans decided to vote against the measure, but the aid of a number of democrats decided to vote against it. A number of the members of the Nebraska delegation voted to lay the bill on the table, not because it affected them as members of congress, but because it affected the president, cabinet and heads of departments.

In order to meet the purposes for which the bill was originally intended, to guard against "leaks" in the departments dealing with statistics, General Grosvener will on Monday introduce a simple bill making it a misdemeanor on the part of any employe of the government to give advance information that would have a tendency to influence the purchase or sale of any commodity.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has surpassed all other medicines in merit, sales and cures. It success, great as it has been, has apparently only just begun. It received more testimonials in the last two years than any previous two—over 40,000. It has the abiding confidence of the people—the strongest proof of its unequalled worth. It purifies the blood, cures all blood diseases, all humors and all eruptions. It strengthens the stomach, creates an appetite and builds up the whole system. It cures that tired feeling and makes the weak strong. In usual liquid, or in new tablet form, 100 Doses One Dollar.

FAIRBANKS VISITS ATLANTA

Vice President Addresses the Commercial Club on National Unity.

STRENUOUS ROUND OF ENTERTAINMENT

Luncheon, Reception at Ohio Club, Drive to Fort McPherson, Public Reception and Banquet Complete the Day.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 19.—Vice President and Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks, on their return from Birmingham to Washington, spent twelve strenuous hours today in the hands of their Atlanta friends. From noon until midnight but little time was allowed them to escape from a round of entertainments tendered by personal and official friends. The party arrived a few moments before noon. To greet them were Colonel Robert J. Lowry, an intimate friend of the vice president and his host during his Atlanta visit, and Major E. W. Halford. The program of entertainments included a luncheon to the vice president at the Capital City club and reception at the Ohio club. An automobile drive ended at Fort McPherson, where the vice presidential salute was fired and where a review of the troops took place. At 6 o'clock a public reception was given, where more than 1,000 persons greeted the vice president. A banquet at 8 o'clock, attended by about forty of the leading citizens of Atlanta, closed the day.

Mrs. Fairbanks and Mrs. Ackert were entertained at luncheon by Mrs. Lowry. The Atlanta Woman's club tendered a reception and later the Atlanta Daughters of the American Revolution gave a reception at the Fremont Driving club to their distinguished guests. A drive to various points of interest and an informal dinner completed the day.

Banquet in Evening. Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks was the guest of honor at a banquet at the Capital City club tonight, about fifty guests being present.

In thanking the people of Atlanta for their cordial welcome Vice President Fairbanks said there was something in the hospitality of the south which is unsurpassed anywhere. He expressed wonder at the transformation that had occurred in the city since his last visit, twenty years ago. The struggle of two score years ago was spoken of by the vice president who praised the people for the prompt restoration of peace and the obliteration of the scars of war, and then he said:

"We realize that we are fellow citizens of the great republic, undivided in purpose and one in our devotion to the same. We are proud of our country, proud of its citizenship, all eager to promote its best interests. There never has been produced braver men than the Americans who have posed each other on the historic fields of the south."

Tribute to General Wheeler

Speaking of the ready response from north and south to the call to arms in the Spanish-American conflict, he said:

"The south is entitled to great honor for its part in that national exigency. I shall never forget an evening I spent with President William McKinley's name which is a priceless heritage to us all. He loved the south,
