with having tried to bribe a federal inspector at Kansas City to past had meat The decision of Justice Phillips, said Mr. Crumpacker, was to the effect that the government had no right to inspect the packing plants, and that its province was confined to the inspection of meat for interstate business. Continuing, Mr. Crumpacker said that the inspection, to be effective, must be put on a legal basis. States must do the inspecting of meats in preparation for commerce, he said, for the government can exercise no jurisdiction over the business unless it is for interstate commerce. There is no question, he said but that the packers could drive every federal inspector out of their plants if they desired. "If I were given the time I could convince

City Engineer's Appointment.

The sixth question queried if the mayor did not think it was injurious to democracy to rush to the defense of a "notorious" re publican in open council meeting, as he did Tuesday night with regard to City Engineer Rosewater. The mayor replied that he claimed to have the right to demand reasons from the council for rejecting appointments, notwithstanding custom had been contrary He said that he expected to break other old customs before he finished his term. No councilman had been able to give him good reasons for rejecting the engineer, he said. Mr. Rosewater, he stated, is an engineer known all over the country as an expert Regardless of customs, the mayor said he wanted to declare that during his administration he intended to "butt in" on every department, whether it be the council water works or what not. He had told the people he would be mayor and know what was going on and he proposed to do so. He declared he did not care a rap whether he lost all political prestige or succeeded himself or filled any other public office. Returning to the matter of the engineer. the mayor said he had failed to find a single candidate for the place recommanded by any councilman or any one else, whom he cared to experiment with. The city had heen robbed in the past, he assorted; the engineer's position is one of great importance, and he did not propose to shoulder the responsibility of putting a man there whom he knew nothing about or lacked infidence in.

Clean and Honest.

Question eight demanded to know what his honor meant when he said in a speech at the Krug theater that if elected he would clean out the city hall from cellar to garret? The mayor replied he meant the democratic administration would be clean and pure and if any man he appointed did not come up to expectations he would lose his head. Also that any office he found unnecessary he would cut out, no matter in what department or who filled it.

Question nine asked why he had congratulated the club and praised it as the best organized in the city and then turned down appointces it favored? Mayor Dahlman said he wanted to repeat his praise of the organization. He pointed to Dan Connell, who had sought the office of plumb-ing inspector, and said he regretted he could not give it to him. He then made it plain that in appointing Tom Flynn street commissioner he considered the demands of union labor satisfied and that McVea's appointment came through endorsements of business men who had contributed heavily financially to democratic success and whom
