PAPERS OF EXPENSIVE KINDS

Little Made by Hand in the United States—Products of Other Countries. American users of imported paper have to pay high prices because of the duty, yet a great deal of foreign made paper comes into New York every year. Hand made papers form the bulk of these imports, for while American paper mills are not far behind their foreign competitors in making machine paper, there is no comparison to be made in the hand turned kinds. Almost all hand made papers come from Japan, with Italy and France following in the order named. Imperial Japan paper is one of the finest of the Japanese brands, with numerous imitations because of its beauty. Experts decide whether a paper is genuine Imperial Japan or an imitation by looking along the surface toward the light. If it is genuine it presents a woolly appearance, though the surface is perfectly smooth. This paper is as tough and firm as a piece of light cloth. Most expensive of the hand made papers imported from Japan is the Imperial Japanese vellum, the cost of which is $115 a ream of 500 sheets. A curious way of determining whether a paper is hand made or produced by machinery is to drop it on still water. If it is hand made it will be flat, if not the paper will quickly curl. A New Yorker of poetic inclinations published a volume of his verses. He ordered the printer to use the most expensive paper procurable. An edition of 1,000 copies was printed and a few were distributed by the proud author to his admiring friends. Each book cost the poet $1.30. He is one of the few poets who have gone in for very expensive printing. The paper used was hand made and the decorations were gorgeous. About 80 per cent of the edition is in the hands of a New York bookseller, and if he sells a book occasionally he receives a generous commission. One very peculiar paper from Japan is called kuro nakabaha. It is made by hand and remains unfinished, except for carefully scattered bits of feathers, dry leaves, twigs and seedlings, whatever trash may be near the workman engaged in the making. These pieces are thrown upon the paper and give it a decidedly surprising effect. Commercial papers of American manufacture have nothing to boast of either in the process of their manufacture or their finished appearance. The cheapest of these is sold at 1 cent a pound, while the best linen papers bring from 35 to 40 cents. An ordinary novel—one of the best sellers, for instance—costing $1.25, is usually printed on paper worth about 34 cents a pound. The manila paper in which the salmagundi wraps up your novel ordinarily is worth twice as much. When you come to a picture in your book you find it generally on a smooth, glossy page. This is coated paper, made exactly like the other pages, but having a surface produced by covering it with a certain kind of clay and subjecting it to great pressure and heat. This sort of paper usually costs from 4 to 15 cents a pound. Writing and note papers, sold in the corner drug stores in all colors, are worth usually 25, 30 or 75 cents a pound. The man who makes these papers sells them for 8, 10 and 12 cents. Water marking papers in America is a business proposition with no frills to it. In Japan, Italy and France the makers of hand made papers indulge their fancies and the Japs have made wonderful designs as water marks. They include entire landscapes in some of their more elaborate papers and even photographs are reproduced. An American firm has letterheads made of this Japan paper with the firm's name and address, visible code, branch offices and so on, all included in the water mark. A clothing house in a western city uses the old English style papers. Some of its recent productions in booklet form were made of Italian hand made paper which had been dipped in coffee to give it an antique appearance. Sugar paper is frequently used for covers. It is a sort of rice paper, stiff and damp proof. It derives its name from its oridinary function, which is packing for sugar barrels. After being soaked, it dries in wrinkles, and half tone cuts printed on this paper give the effect of an etching. Dealers in rare or antique books have often to mend the injured volumes in their possession, and this they do ingeniously without destroying the book by inserting new paper. Old books of all sorts are bought and sold by year and date of publication. When a valuable book of a certain period becomes mutilated the dealer takes his patch paper from the book of the proper year and does his repairing without breaking the uniformly aged appearance of the volume.—New York Sun.

Gas Company Must Pay for Trees.—The New York court of appeals rules that a gas company is responsible for the destruction of trees by the leaking of its pipes. Street trees have no worse enemies than leaking gas pipes. The roots absorb poison from the soil permeated by illuminating gas. Rows of beautiful trees, lush, green and unmarred, are often marred and the effect destroyed by the unexplained death of three or four and a loss of vigor of several others in the very center of the row. The cause is unexplained until the soil is dug up and found to be charged with gas from a leaky pipe.—Philadelphia Press.

An Honest Tramp.—"Lady, won't you give a poor old fellow something to eat? I'm an honest man," pleaded the tramp at the back door. "Prove your honesty," suggested the sweet little woman. "I have not suffered from the San Francisco earthquake." Without another word he was taken in and given such a feast as seldom falls to the lot of those who take so many free rides on the railroads.—Judge.

Willing to Take a Chance.—"Ain't you rather young to be left in charge of a drug store?" "Perhaps so, ma'am; what can I do for you?" "You? Your employers know it's dangerous to leave a mere boy like you in charge of such a place?" "I am competent to serve you, madam, if you will state your wants." "Don't they know you might poison some one?" "There is no danger of that, madam; what can I do for you?" "I think I had better go to the store down the street." "I can serve you just as well as they can, and as cheaply." "Well, you may give me a 5-cent stamp, but it don't look right."—Houston Post.
