Big Job on Tax Books.

County Auditor Cheyne and his force of clerks are at work revising the tax books for 1906 as a result of the work of the Board of County Supervisors at its meeting last week as a board of equalization. The task is a big one, as every item has to be gone over and the assessment on live stock either raised or lowered to meet the average figure agreed upon by the supervisors.

The assessors in the various townships place the value on stock according to their own ideas and the consequence is that there is a wide difference in the assessment on the same class of stock in the several townships. The supervisors, to equalize matters, strike an average and then the assessors' figures are returned by them to the county auditor, who is required to conform with the average struck by the board.

The following table, compiled from the findings of the board of supervisors, shows the number of animals in each class of live stock, their total value as fixed by the assessors and the average valuation fixed by the board of supervisors:

Table with 4 columns: Number, Value, Ave. Value, and Total Value. Rows include Horses, Cattle, Swine, Sheep, and various types of stock.
