OLD IRISH MEDICAL SCHOOL

Golden Jubilee of University Recalls Interesting Facts Regarding Its Present Location. DUBLIN, June 16.—(Special Cablegram to The Bee.)—The celebration of the golden jubilee of the Catholic University School of Medicine calls to mind a little known fact that on the site of the present world-famous medical school an eminent Dublin apothecary named Wetherall had a house with large anatomical rooms in the years 1680 to 1688. In the latter year the Dublin Philosophical society, founded by William Molyneux the author of "Ireland's Case," erected a laboratory under the direction of Dr. Allan Mullan. In 1688 this society established a museum and added a botanical garden, but the troubles of 1689 put an end to the existence of a too little known Irish institution, one of whose members, Dr. Naclauson, was as good as the term "microphone." In 1780, on the site of Wetherall's rooms, previously known as "Crow's Nest," the Crow Street Music Hall was built, and was duly opened for the practice of Italian music on November 16, 1781. In 1785 the Crow Street theater, Cecilia street, replaced the music hall and flourished for sixty-two years, finally closing on May 13, 1847. The Apothecaries' Hall purchased the site in 1836 and built the medical school, which in 1855 became the Catholic University School of Medicine.
