Incorporated under the laws of Arizona. Capital Stock, $1,500,000.00. Shares, par value, $1.00 each.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND SHARES ONLY OF TREASURY STOCK AT 10 CENTS PER SHARE

Great Fortunes of Today

Count up the wealthy capitalists and bankers of Omaha and the country at large and note the large majority that have made the bulk of their fortunes in mining. They may not be known as mining kings, but nearly every one of them has large interests in paying mines. No business in the world produces such large profits and none is so free from loss when legitimate enterprises are dealt with. These men have been clear headed, shrewd business men who have carefully investigated and then bought their holdings at a low figure before the big dividends have sent the price to the top notch.

Wild investments have never paid in mining any more than in any other business. The shrewd investor watches his chance and when the conditions are right he does not hesitate. Men like Chas. M. Schwab, former president of the Steel Trust; Newhouse, the millionaire copper king of Salt Lake, Guggenheim of the smelter trust and others of equal financial strength and sagacity have bought and are developing the property adjoining and surrounding our claims. Their judgment is backed by years of experience in mining. You can take advantage of the experience of these men who have made millions from their mines. What better opportunity could be found? We are in the center—these men surround us. If they win we must win also. They have millions invested and know what they are doing. Could anything be surer than investment in our property? We invite your most careful investigation, in fact we are anxious to show you why our property is the kind that has made the big fortunes in the past, the kind that the millionaires are investing in today.

Some Winners Bought Originally at Low Figures

- 1,000 shares in Alaska Treadwell pays annually $1,500.
1,000 shares of Homestead stock pays annually $6,000.
1,000 shares in Tamarack pays annually $6,000.
1,000 shares in Calumet and Hecla pays annually $83,000

Fully paid and non-assessable is offered for a short time, the proceeds to be used in development work only. No salaried officers, no debts, no personal liability to stockholders.

Thirty Million Dollars of Gold Ore blocked out on the claim adjoining ours and there is every evidence that our property is just as good.

Schwab, Newhouse, Guggenheim and other shrewd millionaire investors are developing the property surrounding us. They investigated before they bought. If you investigate you will buy our stock at 10 cents per share for it is the best opportunity ever offered to the public.

See us at once for this stock is selling fast.

Interesting Details

Our property is in a proven district where large mines have been discovered and developed, and not an isolated prospect. It is surrounded by mines of proven value.

The Montgomery-Shoshone mine is less than two years old. It was offered for sale shortly after its discovery for $4,000 with no purchaser. Five months ago Chas. M. Schwab, former president of the Steel Trust, paid five million dollars for this property and it now has over thirty million dollars of gold ore ready for shipment. This property joins us on the east. Being surrounded as we are by such valuable properties we have the fullest confidence in our proposition. Untold wealth lies below the surface. It must be uncovered and developed. Money is needed to do this. That is why we are offering one hundred thousand shares of treasury stock at 10 cents per share for a short time only.

A comparatively small amount of development work is required because in this district ore of extremely high value is found close to the surface. In some cases within 100 feet of the surface ore of fabulous richness has been uncovered. This means not only less expense in developing the mine, but also a great saving of time. Every officer of this company has had years of experience in mining. We can profit in the future by that experience and you can profit with us. We have the property and it must be developed in order to make it valuable. We want you to call at our office and let us show you what we have. Every statement backed by facts.

The conservative people of this vicinity who have investigated our offer have invested with us and we would like to add you to the growing family of the Nevada Standard Gold Mining & Milling Company. One hundred thousand shares only will be sold at 10 cents. The price will then be advanced.

BEHEADING IS DUE IN FEZ

Sultan of Morocco Would Have Lively Time if He Were Active.

RAISOULI SHOULD GO TO THE BLOCK

Majority of Favorites of Sultan Feather Their Nest at Expense of State Careless of Consequences.

FEZ, June 16.—(Special Cablegram to The Bee)—Algerias is gone—forgotten. Morocco remains. And if there is one place in the world a fit subject for comic opera Fez is that place.

Never did any ruler have so great an opportunity of showing that there was stuff in him as Mulai-Abdel-Azis of the present day has had. Sardaniapulus could not leave a greater name than he if he would only leave his harem and get upon his horse for the first business of a sultan is to cut off heads. Not for a century have there been so many heads absolutely ripe to be cut off and hung upon the gates of all the Moorish towns. First comes Raisouli, whose head should certainly adorn the gates of Tangier, for the climb down the Maghzen has made before him renders it ludicrous to the Moors and dangerous to every European in the land. Just in the very town which is set in a focus in the eye of Europe no authority exists. Raisouli's followers, armed to the teeth, permeate the place, laughing the bea's troops to scorn and working their sweet will as it best pleases them. Only three days ago they shot and killed two men in the full light of day, the bullets whistling about like humble bees amongst the citizens. True that the victims wanted killing as badly as they could. One of them was a murderer in "rain" and both were thieves. The greatest danger that the sultan has to face is what is going on in Tangier, for Raisouli is neither feeble, as is the "rouqi," nor yet a trifle, as the sultan is, and Europe looks upon the situation right across the straits.

Miscreants for Europeans. The entire shereefian army certainly numbers under 3,000 men, and various European instructors—French, British and Italian—find their posts more secure. The difficulty is that in Morocco men of energy are scarce. In fact, but one exists able and competent to deal with Raisouli and the pretender, to curb the unruly tribes and make the sultan once again master of his own house and not, as he is now, the shadow of a shade, a king in partibus, a ruler such as those one sees in comic opera, a commander of the faithful, without the slightest faith in anything on earth. That man is El Menebbi, once ambassador in London and now living in honorable retirement in Tangier, driven from power by court intrigues of ministers incapable of anything but theft.

The pretender rules the eastern half of all the territory, having some six and twenty tribes at his command. He has a custom house outside Melide and collects taxes from his tribes. He, too, is quite incompetent, having made no advance for the last three years, although the sultan has no army to oppose him if he should march on Fez. The territory he rules is mostly mountainous, sterile and stony, and all the wildest of the Berber tribes, who never gave more than a shadowy allegiance to the sultans of Morocco, inhabit it, making it pandemonium with their feuds. All money laid out on its conquest is money thrown away, for the pretender can neither make nor mar the sultan, and the expense involved would be exorbitant. The tribes the roqui (pretender) dominates have never been productive of anything but trouble to the state, and if the sultan can restore some show of order in the country which remains still nominally faithful to his rule the cause of the pretender will fall as rapidly as it arose and gradually die out.

Sultana May Lose Hope. Still, the necessity of a strong effort on the sultan's part is manifest. But with the government he has to back him up, it seems impossible that any can be made, and it is natural enough that, seeing all the pitfalls in his path, the sultan may have given up all hope. Out of a comic opera no one has ever seen government such as that which at present misrules Fez. There is but on exception, and that is Abdel Kirm Ben Bilman, the minister of foreign affairs, who is an honorable man. He still retains some of the best traditions of the olden times. His grandfather had his head cut off for treason, which some how gives the grandson quite an air of having been brought up in all the best traditions of the state. Cunning and merry-looking, he is, they say, a poet. Report proclaims him honest—that is, as far as it is possible for him to be in his position. He clearly sees the ruin of the Moor, and, though an amiable fanatic, not liking Christians over much, would welcome anything that would bring order and security. He knows the feelings of the outside world, having himself been envoy both in Paris and St. Petersburg; he has intelligence and tact, though he lacks both courage and initiative, but if a strong prime minister were to arise, like Jonah's gourd, and spread his shadow over all the land, Ben Bilman certainly would second him with all his intellect and knowledge of affairs.

Chamberlain a Negro.

The chamberlain is a stout negro, one Beni-Aish, a merry, hospitable soul, with fair, round belly with good "couscous" lined. He once was governor of Tetuan, is now lord chamberlain, and only in an opera, either of Offenbach or Lecocq, could such a man be found. Fit at a moment's notice to play "Bones" or "Mr. Johnson" at a Christy minstrel's show, he really is a Moorish mountebank, whom no one could take seriously, even in Fez, the land of paradox. Being a negro, he is less fanatical than most of his compeers and foreigners who know him say he is hospitable in his new palace, built with the money he has stolen from various sources, where he loves to entertain. Naturally he knows nothing of affairs, being profoundly ignorant of everything outside the daily round of ceremonial state in which he spends his life. Still, he is not an evil counselor, and only let him steal a little now and then and he will not actively set himself up against reform.

Gubbas, the minister of war, looks like a Babu from Bengal, or perhaps more resembles an old charwoman in a provincial town. Why he was chosen for the post that once Menebbi filled, Allah alone can tell, but in himself he is a kindly man enough, speaking both French and English fluently and well. English he learned in Manchester, where he lived as a merchant, became a liberal and a free trader, and to this day laments the death of Mr. Gladstone, whom he refers to as "great man of state and very liberal." His common salutation is "My dear," which he applies to all and sundry, patting their heads, after the fashion of a cardinal as shown upon the stage.

House of Lies. The grand vizier is Si Fedul Ghannit. He is now old and counts for little in the state, but has been in his time a figure, having served faithfully the sultans, according to his lights, and having never had the chance to make his fortune until quite lately in his extreme old age. His house is called "Maquinat el Kidouq," that is, the manufactory of lies, and Moors relate, if you watch carefully, that with the sparks that issue from his chimney when slight, lies mingle by the yard. All this he takes as a great compliment to his intelligence and knowledge of affairs. Tall and distinguished looking, with a proud white beard, which he strokes now and then, as with the fingers of his other hand he tells the beads upon his rosary, he looks a patriarch. His family came from Granada, as his name implies, and was expelled from Spain with the Moriscos, an injury which, it would seem, still rankles in his blood and which he still endeavors to repay by keeping out the Christian from the land with all his might and main.

Renegade Jew a Power.

Most of the trouble that afflicts the land lies at the door of the chief favorite, Sheikh Taxi in his name and he has managed in the period of three years to make his fortune and to install two of his brothers in fat offices. His family originally were Jews and came from Tass, a small town, buried in mountains, between Fez and Ujda, where now the roqui rules. The sheikh has been in Manchester and, it is said, can "spick a leetle Inglik." He is a tall and portly looking man, who, but three years ago was steward to Menebbi when he was minister of war, and was prime mover in the plot which drove him from his post, leaving the path to riches and to power wholly at the butler's command.

Now all are rich, and whilst the people beg about the streets, the sheikh is building a great palace, fit for a sultan, out of the money he has pilfered from the state. Such are the sultan and his government. He is weak as water and they chiefly rogues; and whilst they rob the people, knowing him impotent to check them, he sits still, just like a sailor whistling for a breeze upon a windless sea.

Opening of Carey Lands at St. Anthony, Idaho, June 15, 1906.

Seven thousand acres of choice farm lands lying from eight to twenty miles eastward from St. Anthony, along the line of the new Yellowstone park extension of the Oregon Short Line railroad, will be thrown open for entry by the Marysville Canal and Improvement company on Friday, June 15, 1906, at 10 o'clock a. m. Cost of land and water $25.00 per acre, payable in ten annual installments, interest at 6 per cent on deferred payments. A drawing will take place on day of opening, absolutely fair and impartial. Selection must be made at time of drawing. There is no richer soil or more productive region in the Snake river valley. Improved lands in the vicinity worth $50 to $60 per acre.

Aside from this the C. C. Moore Real Estate company will offer for sale immediately after drawing 50,000 acres of farm lands, with water rights, improved and unimproved, tracts to suit the purchaser on easy terms. A new town in the midst of these lands on the Yellowstone Park railroad offers every inducement to prospective business men and investors. Keep your eye on Ashton. Plans of above lands and town and all information relative can be secured at the offices of the C. C. Moore Real Estate company, St. Anthony and Ashton, Idaho, and W. F. Cross, secretary Marysville Canal and Improvement company, Marysville, Idaho. Write at once for further information.

DOWIE SAYS HE IS ELIJAH

Under of Zion City Says He Received Revelation.

ALIENISTS WATCH WITNESS ON STAND

In Testimony He Asserts that He Received Impression for Years, but at Last Recognizes Identity.

CHICAGO, June 16.—John Alexander Dowie, on the witness stand today before Judge Landis in the United States district court in the Zion City controversy was asked during cross examination: "Are you Elijah, the restorer?"

"I have always been."

"When did you first become conscious of the fact?"

"It gradually grew. I resented the revolution as it were and for years was grieved and angry if anyone suggested that I was Elijah. I am not a visionary man. The first time it came to my attention was in Melbourne or Sydney, Australia, while at the head of a Bible society. One night I was asked to preach a sermon. I went to supper and ordered two meals which I forgot to eat. I had been thinking over my subject and could not get beyond Elijah. I was thinking of his remarkable career and my supper got cold."

"One of my deacons told me I had a message from God. I laughed and said: 'You go away and let me alone.' He said, 'I want to tell you, you are Elijah.' He said that three times and walked away. I was much distressed, for he could not have known I had been thinking of Elijah for an hour. I spoke, and my last idea was that I was Elijah. But as God is my judge, the thought that I was the second embodiment never entered my head. After the sermon one member said to me: 'I feel like saying you are Elijah.' I said 'I am not—don't get that bee in my bonnet.' For years I would not think of it but in later years I had to come to it. They were all right. The first open revelation was that night."

A number of alienists were in attendance at court while Dowie was on the stand. During the cross-examination Dowie asserted point blank his title to ownership of all Zion City property. He declared that for years he has had an income amounting to $10,000 a year. He stated he never knew whence it came. He denied that he had ever used any of the money for his own benefit but said he spent it for the use of God and humanity.
