law as applied to delegate elections imposed a pretty severe test upon the voter and I remarked to a friend as I came out of the booth that if I were a member of the legislature I believed I would not be in favor of retaining such a law on the statute books. It is too burdensome for practical purposes. But, of course, this is a matter for the legislature and not for the courts. In my own case, I know the plan is too burdensome and severe on the voter. I am willing to concede that I count myself of ordinary intelligence and it took me twenty-five minutes to read my ballot. When I got down the list the first time I thought I had made no mistakes, but I counted and found I had voted for only seventy-three men, ten short.

the polls precisely and expeditiously. The law should be so framed as to encourage and not discourage every voter to vote. Considering the difficulties under which the voters labored at the polls I think the vote was representative, and if more had voted the result only have intensified the result.

As a matter of fairness if a man's name begins with W or X it seems to me the rotation ballot is a good thing. No candidate ought to suffer a disadvantage because of the initial of his name. But where the number of names on a ticket reaches 200 or 300 it appears the rotation ballot is difficult to vote. Yet I believe that anything which will make the voter careful in the study and selection of the names of men for whom he shall cast his ballot ought not to be excluded from the law. However, it may appear after all the returns are in that so far as the election of delegates to a state convention is concerned a change in the law would be advisable.

LONG LIST OF CASUALTIES

Dead and Injured Victims of Fireworks Festivities Number Hundreds.

FIVE BOYS KILLED AT WILKESBARRE, PA.

One Fatality in Iowa, Three in Wisconsin and Four in Indiana—Hundred Hurt in St. Louis.

NEW YORK, July 4.—While the list of minor accidents as a result of today's celebration of the Fourth of July reached far up into the hundreds, there were fewer serious casualties than in many other years. Only one death attributable to the celebration was reported by the police, that of Morris Shapiro, a settler water manufacturer, who was shot in the head by a stray bullet as he was driving through a street in Harlem. He died soon afterward. The police were unable to learn from where the bullet came.

There were ten deaths in Greater New York from the heat and humidity. Five Boys Instantly Killed. WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 4.—At Wana, a mining town five miles from here, five boys were killed tonight and many others injured by celebrating the Fourth of July.

Two of the killed were brothers named Pachukis. Two other brothers named Shukawics and the other named Long. They had placed powder in a pipe and it had failed to go off. They then forced a stick of dynamite into the pipe and began pounding it. A terrific explosion followed. Four of the boys were fatally mangled and the fifth died on the way to the hospital. Some of the injured are so badly hurt they may die.

Many Casualties in Iowa. DES MOINES, Ia., July 4.—One person was fatally injured and several others seriously hurt by the collapse of the balcony today at Danbury, Woodbury county, Iowa, during a Fourth of July parade. Dispatches from various towns in the state chronicle the serious injury of seven persons, the majority children, as the result of Fourth of July accidents. At Waterloo, Howard Parry, aged 15, and Leo Hollar, aged 15, were drowned while attempting to swim across Unlesh lake.

Over Hundred Injured. ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 4.—Statistics gathered by the police indicate that while more than 100 persons were injured, there were no deaths here today as the result of the celebration of the nation's birthday anniversary. GREAT WORK OF CONGRESS

Most Important Session Since the Close of the Civil War.

LEGISLATION OF FAR-REACHING EFFECT

Hon. John L. Kennedy Talks on the Results of Congressional Work—Many Important Bills Passed.

Congressman John L. Kennedy is back from Washington, and while he is pretty well tired out by the strenuous labors of the session of congress, speaks enthusiastically of the results accomplished. He said: "The first session of the Fifty-ninth congress will prove to be the most important in the history of the country since the civil war. This is particularly true because the measures enacted into law are mostly constructive in character and will strengthen our institutions and laws and develop our trade."

The railroad legislation would of itself make the session memorable. It is a great step forward in the regulation and control of common carriers. The people have complained, not only of excessive rates, as of unfair discriminations. The new law will in large measure correct these evils.

The discussion on the bill make it perfectly plain that it is the intention to perfect the law still further if necessary, and that in the meantime its provisions must be carried into effect without fear or favor.

The pure food law has been granted to Oklahoma and the Indian Territory and it is left to Arizona and New Mexico to say whether or not they shall be admitted as one state. Should either of them declare against joint statehood that will end it for years to come.

The new state of Oklahoma, energetic and enthusiastic citizenship and it has a great future before it. The removal of the tax on denatured alcohol means a great deal to the mechanic and much, very much, to the farmer. It can be made from almost all kinds of farm products, and if it will accomplish one-half of the wonders claimed for it in the generation of heat, light and power, it will revolutionize many modern methods and relegate the ill-smelling gasoline to the rear.

of reform will make her not a yellow but a powerful resource in the international vineyard. In India, in the Pacific, in Egypt and in China, the statesmanlike and far-reaching extension of education and I trust will be pardoned if I say that the British empire, not the nation, nor yet the commerce of our nations, have given us so just a claim to the gratitude of the people of Asia as have our school teachers, sent, many of them, by private rather than by public funds. The British empire has become the vehicle for the conveyance of governmental wisdom to the people of the world. It is general information, for beginning with Magna Charta and continuing through the Declaration of Independence down to the present, our language has been employed for the benefit of the continent of Europe. Our own nation traces the most illustrious example known to history of a great population working out its destiny through laws of its own making and under the auspices of its own choosing. Through our law, we have led the way beyond England in recognizing the omnipotence of the people. It is difficult to overestimate the progress of a nation and in turning the thought of the world away from the past to the possibilities of self government, the pioneers of freedom made western civilization possible.

Effect of an Idea. An idea will sometimes revolutionize an individual, a nation, a state, a nation, or even a world, and the idea that man possesses inalienable rights which the state will not give and which no state, though it can deny, cannot take away, has made millions of human beings stand erect and claim their God-given inheritance. While the era of constitutional liberty is over, the era of whilomery is not over, and the arbitrary power of every day decreasing, the leaders of the world's thought, the English and the Americans, and the other Christian nations as well, have yet much to do in teaching nations the will to confer the liberty and respect for the public servants, upon whom the people are so dependent.

The Christian nations must lead the movement for the promotion of peace, not only because they are entitled under the banner of the Prince of Peace, but also because they have attained such a degree of intelligence that they can no longer take pride in a purely physical victory. The belief that moral questions can be settled by the shedding of blood is a relic of barbarism; to doubt the dynamic power of rightness is to deny the right itself. That nation which is unwilling to trust its cause to the universal conscience or which before a tribunal where reason holds sway betrays a lack of faith in the soundness of its own principles.

Our country congratulates itself on the success of President Roosevelt in hastening peace between Great Britain and Japan, and on the moral victory more glorious than a victory in war, King Edward has shown and a large number of the members of the British cabinet are now speaking in the same way. It means much that the two great English speaking nations are thus arrayed on the same side. I venture to suggest that the world's peace would be greatly promoted by an agreement among the leading nations to the effect that any dispute should be referred to the submission of the question in controversy to an impartial court for investigation and decision. The right to accept or reject the decision. The preliminary investigation would in almost every case insure an amicable settlement, and the reserved right would be a sufficient protection against any possible injustice.

Disunity of Labor. Let me go a step farther and appeal for a clearer recognition of the dignity of labor. The odium which rests upon the workman and his family, and the influence of the world around. The theory that the workman is a creature of the employer is more respectable to consume what others have produced than to be a producer. The workman is a member of the great society of men, and he has created an almost insuperable gulf between the leisure class and the worker. The workman is right in asserting that the most of the perplexing problems of society grow out of the gulf between the two classes, and that the only way to bridge the gulf is to bring the two classes closer together. The workman is a member of the great society of men, and he has created an almost insuperable gulf between the leisure class and the worker.

Individual Responsibility. While Europe and America have advanced in the art of civilization, and in the proper estimate upon those who work, even our nations have not yet fully learned the lesson that every man is a member of the great society of men, and that every man is responsible for his own actions. The physical health, intellectual development and moral character of a nation are dependent upon the quality of its citizens. The workman is a member of the great society of men, and he has created an almost insuperable gulf between the leisure class and the worker.

Christian Nation's Work. If this ideal—which must be accepted as the true one, if our religion is true—had been more generally understood and acted upon, the world would be a different place. It is in the conduct of Christian nations there would now be less of the selfishness and more of the altruism which is the true basis of civilization.

Efficiency of Example. Can we doubt the efficacy of example in the history of the world? There has been an increase in education during the last century and the school houses have not been crowded with children, but the quality of the education has been so high that the nations have differed less about the methods to be employed. Persecutions have been heard of, but they have been for the benefit of the persecuted, wars have been waged for the alleged improvement of the world, but they have been for the benefit of the world, and the world has been advanced by the example of the nations which have been the most successful in the world.

Higher Destiny of Service. Society has passed through a period of adjustment, the nations taking what they had the power to hold. But we are already entering a second era—an era of adjustment. The nations are no longer content with what they can do, but what they should do. The nations are no longer content with what they can do, but what they should do. The nations are no longer content with what they can do, but what they should do.

In our beloved land. Before the sun sets on one of these centers of civilization it arises upon another. The temple of Karnak, an ancient artist carved the likeness of an Egyptian king, represented as holding a bow in his right hand and a staff in his left. The other hand is raised a club with which to strike the natives. I venture to suggest that the world's peace would be greatly promoted by an agreement among the leading nations to the effect that any dispute should be referred to the submission of the question in controversy to an impartial court for investigation and decision.

Great Opportunities and Burdens. As we are gathered tonight in England's capital, permit me to conclude with a sentiment. It represents Queen Victoria about her and the other points upward. He told the story so plainly that it was hardly necessary to explain the words "valued to brighter worlds and led the way."

It was a beautiful conception, more beautiful than that which gave the world the Greek slave, the dying gladiator or the crucified Christ. It embodied the idea with which the expanding feeling of comradeship makes applicable to the relations of husband and wife. Let us indulge in the hope that the workman is a member of the great society of men, and he has created an almost insuperable gulf between the leisure class and the worker.

The American and British flags were draped on the walls of the dining room and the orchestra played a program of American melodies. The guests included Sir Laurence Alma-Tadema, Paul Morton of New York, Frank H. MacVeach of Chicago, Consul General Wynne, Isaac Seligman of New York, Representative Nicholas Longworth of Cincinnati, George Harvey of New York, J. G. A. Leshman, American ambassador to Turkey; Sir H. B. Maxam, and Admiral Scurie.

During the dinner Ambassador Reid read a letter from Queen Alexandra expressing the keenest sorrow over the Salisbury railway disaster and tendering a heartfelt sympathy to all concerned, especially the young bride so suddenly bereaved. The dinner was presided over by Frederick H. Condit of New York.

ALL OMAHA HAS A HOLIDAY (Continued from First Page.) servance of independence day has increased rapidly during the last four years the country over, and the decrease of death and injury in Omaha is merely in line with the rest of the country. The figures, however, show that the advance has been made principally in regard to lookjaw. According to the Journal of the American Medical Association the total deaths from this cause for 1905 attributed to Fourth of July gunpowder celebrations numbered 46. In 1904 but 18 and in 1903, 12. There were 274 persons dead or injured in 1905 against 449 in 1903, the conclusion being that small accidents flourish, but that the more serious ones declined. In 1905 Nebraska's quota to the total casualties was small, there being but four deaths and thirty-nine persons hurt.

Boy Shot with Rifle. The shooting of John Lee, the 13-year-old son of Ambrose Lee, 252 California street, occurred about 11:30 yesterday morning, the rifle being in the hands of a playmate named Frank Welch. Lee, Welch and another boy, named Earl Edwards, were shooting at a bottle in the backyard of the Edwards home on California street near Twenty-fourth. The target was so close that little difficulty was experienced in hitting it. Lee proposed that the shooters step further back and they started to do this when Lee noticed the gun was pointing towards him. "Don't point the gun at me," he said, and endeavored to push the muzzle away. The force used, according to the stories told, was sufficient to cause young Welch's and light wagon, the driver of which whipped up and escaped. The boy was taken to the police station and bruises about the legs and feet dressed by Surgeon Raber. The patient was removed to his home.
