

group of tail of Parliament, a rising of the people will be engineered. The leaders at a recent meeting in Moscow issued instructions to branch organizations throughout the empire warning them against premature divided action and specifically instructing them, when the signal is given, to stand the strike gradually and carefully, avoiding collisions at the beginning. M. Cherenoff, who escaped Friday from the offices of the Miska when a raid was made upon a meeting of a committee of the revolutionary party, is regarded as one of their most skillful leaders.

Stolypin unequal to task. While M. Stolypin, who succeeds M. Gorenkyin as premier, undoubtedly is a much stronger man than his predecessor he probably will be unequal to the task of piloting the country through the revolutionary upheaval which is just ahead, and the general belief is that a dictatorship must come soon.

Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the events connected with the dissolution of Parliament is that the government carefully avoided notifying the representatives of the foreign powers of what was coming. No word of official warning was received even by the representatives of Russia's Ally, France. The only intimation that something was about to happen was the appearance of the government's ministers and plenipotentiaries shortly after midnight, but this morning, immediately after the guards had been stationed, notes were sent explaining the measures taken to protect the foreign representatives. Up to this evening no other communication has been transmitted to them.

The representatives of the powers were busy today dispatching long telegrams to their governments advising them of the sudden and serious turn of events. There were several conferences of diplomats this afternoon concerning the advisability of asking for warships, or at least of hiring steamships to run off the subjects in case of necessity, but no concerted action was decided upon. Tonight the trains are filled with foreigners departing abroad.

Numerous Small Riots. An imperial manifesto issued tonight, which is regarded both as a threat and an appeal to the emperor's millions of subjects to join in suppressing the revolution under promise of land, summons the "faithful sons of holy Russia." Many liberals consider this a direct enactment of the Black Hundred.

In spite of the excitement the day passed with comparative quiet in the capital and street fighting only began with the advent of darkness, but the collisions generally were on a small scale.

About midnight there were rumors of heavier fighting at the Nawa gate, where the massacre of the followers of Father Japon took place eighteen months ago today. The troops there are said to have fired several volleys and it is reported there were a number of casualties.

RUSSIAN DIMA MEETS IN FINLAND Two Hundred Members Proposed to Adopt an Address to the People.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 22.—(Special.)—The following dispatch has been received from a representative of the Associated Press who accompanied the members of Parliament to Viborg. It is dated Viborg, midnight: Two hundred members of Russia's outlaw Parliament are gathered here at the hotel Bellevue awaiting the arrival of Count Heyden, M. Stokovich and other prominent members of the right before opening the session at which will be adopted a manifesto that the people be summoned and that they should go to the streets and elect members of all shades of opinion, especially the constitutional democrats, group of toll and social democrats. Present among the members here are M. Mouroumetoff, president of the house; Prince Peter Dolgourkoff and Professor Gradenkoff, its vice presidents, and other citizens of note.

The meeting will be called to order as a regular session of Parliament. The dining room of the hotel where the members are assembled is in great contrast to the imposing surroundings of the Tauride palace. It is crowded to suffocation with excited and preteringing deputies who are gathered according to party affiliations, and are formally discussing and debating tactics and discussing the text of their appeal, for which a general drafting commission is now being chosen. There is a strong possibility that all parties will come to an agreement on the appeal as the radicals are not disposed to insist on their own manifesto demanding the immediate summoning of a constituent assembly by revolutionary means, to which the constitutional democrats object.

The constitutional democrats appear to be downhearted over the dissolution of Parliament, but the members of the group of toll and the socialist are in an exceedingly combative mood.

The corridors of the hotel are crowded with correspondents and members of Parliament. Among the latter are a number of prominent names in the adjoining streets, but there was no demonstration.

The correspondent telephoned at 2 o'clock this morning that the session had adjourned until 8 o'clock. No definite action was decided upon, but it was resolved in principle to adopt an address to the people, stating that the present Parliament came in violation of the constitutional procedure of the government, but appealing to them not to resort to measures which would entail bloodshed.

CEAUS' POSITION IS EXPLAINED He Regards Duma as a Revolutionary and a Constructive Body.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 22.—General von Schwanebach, commander of the empire and one of the members of the ministry who remains in office, tonight gave the Associated Press the government's explanation of the motive necessitating the dissolution of Parliament. In a most emphatic fashion he tried to impress upon the correspondent the idea that dissolution did not mean a return to the old regime, and that the emperor had not abandoned his purpose to introduce a representative government in Russia.

"You can tell the American people," said General von Schwanebach, "that this step was forced upon the government as the only way of extricating the country from the horrible reign of blood and terrorism which prevails. The dissolution of the present Parliament does not mean a return to irresponsible absolutism. The past is dead forever.

"From his majesty's own lips I can assure you that he still believes in the principle of popular representation and firmly intends to adhere to it; but he became convinced that the present Parliament was elected under abnormal conditions and did not represent the true sentiment of the country, and that it was necessary to make another appeal to the nation."

not represent the true sentiment of the country, and that it was necessary to make another appeal to the nation.

"What is the history of the ukase?" was asked the commander.

"Ever since the assembling of Parliament," he replied, "the intransigent temper displayed convinced us (the ministry) that the principal object of those in control was to make it the center of revolutionary agitation, instead of settling down to constructive work, and therefore that sooner or later its dispersal would be necessary. But we wished to wait until its incapacity and true role burned themselves into the minds of the people. As we anticipated, Parliament proceeded to write its own death sentence by demonstrating that it neither was nor desired to be a legislative body, but simply a revolutionary tribunal.

Nevertheless Emperor Nicholas continued to hope for a change of tactics, and only consented to dissolution when every other alternative had been exhausted.

"Ten days ago his majesty was prepared to accept a Parliamentary ministry; but the constitutional democrats by their mad insistence on impossible conditions deliberately rejected the opportunity. Thereupon the emperor conferred with men of all parties and received the opinion—dozens of them every day—and finally became convinced that dissolution was imperative."

"Does the delay in announcing the date for the new elections involve the intention of a change in the basis of representation to universal suffrage?" was asked.

"Not necessarily," replied M. von Schwanebach. "On that point no definite decision has been taken."

"Where do you anticipate that disorders will break out?"

"Certainly not in St. Petersburg. Probably they will be worst in the south. I am convinced that the army is loyal. The disorders which occurred among the troops have not sapped their fidelity as a whole, and once they are engaged against revolutionaries who do not hesitate to resort to the throwing of bombs they will do their duty."

General von Schwanebach declared that the members of Parliament would not be arrested either for their acts or speeches in Parliament however reasonable these might have been, as they were covered by legislative immunity; but he did not conceal the purpose of the government hereafter to hold the members strictly accountable for open acts of treason.

BERGE AFTER PLATTE COUNTY

Fight for Endorsement Will Make Turning Point in His Candidacy.

Fusionist Seeks to Prove That He is a Democrat by Carrying This Stronghold of the Party.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) LINCOLN, July 22.—(Special.)—During the coming week George W. Berge, democratic-populist candidate for governor, will make the fight of his political life and on the result will depend largely whether he is to be the democratic standard-bearer this fall. The fight will be pulled off at Columbus Wednesday at the democratic county convention.

Berge is after an endorsement and an instructed delegation in that county and many who oppose him are seeking to defeat the instruction. The argument against Berge in Platte county is that he is not a democrat, but a populist. As this is the democratic stronghold of the state, an endorsement for Berge would mean a whole lot for him and would necessitate his opponents getting up some other argument to use against him.

Democrats all over the state, it is said here, are watching this contest, and many of them will be influenced by its result. Berge thinks there is no doubt he has the rank and file of the party with him, but that some of the leaders will try to defeat him in the convention. For that reason he will insist that the various counties where he has friends instruct for him.

Recently Berge was asked by some democratic friends who they were for governor and out of that number 238 were for Berge.

Unique Invitation to Governor. Governor Mickey has received an invitation from Madrid castle No. 42, Royal Highlanders, at Tecumseh, to attend a feast which is to take place August 3. The invitation is written in picture writing of the Pawnee Indians on a large piece of leather and is very unique in design. Being interpreted, the invitation reads as follows: "With the coming of the new moon, Teckawmick, or kill-a-bear-with-a-stone, Gov. Mickey, the great white chief of the reservation of Nebraska, is invited to take the test of the Sioux warrior. The door of the council chamber is always open to the great white chief." The new moon is pictured in the sky, below it a warrior is flinging a stone at a great brown bear. Just below this bloody episode the portrait of the governor has been inscribed by the artist and near it is a tent with the fans of the door flung wide open.

LAFOLETTE SPEAKS IN HASTINGS Many Here Wisconsin Senator Discuss Corruption in Legislature.

HASTINGS, Neb., July 22.—(Special Telegram.)—Before an audience which was undoubtedly the largest ever assembled in Hastings to hear a political speech, Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin this afternoon talked for nearly four hours of corruption in the legislatures of cities and states and of corruption in the national law-making body. His speech was full of sensational utterances regarding the servitude of public officials to railroad and allied interests. The address was delivered at the Hastings chautauqua and was listened to by over 6,000 persons. Mr. LaFollette had but a few minutes to spare Saturday, but he was unable to come until today. Special excursion trains were operated from Kearney, Red Cloud and Hanover, Kan., and each brought several hundred persons. The big tent in which Mr. LaFollette spoke was crowded for almost two hours before he went to the hotel. Senator LaFollette began by saying that the country is today confronted by greater dangers than ever before. He spoke of Lincoln's speech on the battlefield of Gettysburg, containing, he said, the simplest definition of democracy. There is, though the same in meaning as that of Washington, Hamilton and Webster. "Have we got that kind of a government today?" he asked. "Are the common councils of the cities, the legislatures of the states, the national congress truly representative of the will of the people? There is no common council, no legislature and no session of the legislature which the corporation interests seek to control and fail. I want to enlist the bankers and the business men of this town in the great movement to save the country. You cannot pick up a newspaper tomorrow morning without reading of some grand jury investigating or indicting some public official who has betrayed his trust. In Milwaukee a grand jury has been in session two years investigating the wrongdoings of public officials. It has indicted nearly everybody who ever had anything to do with the government of that city. Scores of men have been convicted and many of them pleaded guilty."

Mr. LaFollette declared that the railroads had destroyed competition in the grain business and that the American people had to depend for their necessities on upon eight railroads, which got entire control of the supply by combining ownership of the mines with that of the roads. Twelve men, he said, controlled three-fourths of the railroad capital of the country and less than 100 control practically every important industry. The speaker devoted the major portion of his time to a discussion of the railroad rate question. The passage of the rate bill by the last session of congress, he said, was a step in the right direction, but he declared that the Interstate Commerce commission had not contained one vital defect—the absence of any means or authority by which a "reasonable rate" could be determined. "The Interstate Commerce commission can never fix a reasonable rate until it finds the value of the railroad property and uses that value as a basis in determining what the rate should be."

Senator LaFollette added that when the rate debate was in progress in the senate he offered eight amendments, seven of which had been recommended by the Interstate Commerce commission. Each one of these was tabled. He read the vote of the senators on several of these amendments and said the line-up of the members was practically the same on all. Mr. LaFollette closed with a review of the fight which he had in Wisconsin. He said that in 1898 enough delegates to the state convention were pledged to his support to insure his nomination for governor, but that enough of them to defeat him were after-

DETECTIVE DENIES WRONG

Donohoe Protests He Intended No Fraud in the Herd Matter.

RETURNS MONEY TO PRIVATE CITIZEN Chief of Police Thinks Everything is Straight, but Board May Look Into Case Just the Same.

DETECTIVE J. T. Donohoe yesterday made a statement in which he positively denied any intention of wrongdoing in the J. J. Herd matter, in regard to which it was reported last Saturday that Mr. Donohoe would be called to the governor's office to explain.

"I may have been careless in not returning the money received from Dave Harding on June 21 returned to him last Friday evening between 3 and 6 o'clock, giving the money to his bartender at the saloon. I did not know of the understanding referred to by the county attorney's office that in view of me having received expenses from Mr. Harding I was not to make a bill on the state. When I returned from Kansas City with Herd I made my bill on the state as is usual in such cases."

Chief Thinks All is Straight. Chief of Police Donohoe expressed himself as confident there was nothing questionable in the transaction. The chief spoke highly of Detective Donohoe as an officer, saying he had been nine years in the service and never had been before the commissioners on any charge.

Detective Donohoe has an undated receipt stating that Fred Kerchner received $48.38 from Dave Harding. Kerchner is Dave Harding's bartender at 213 South Third street. Mr. Donohoe said he paid Kerchner the money Friday evening. Saturday afternoon Harding said he would know "in fifteen minutes" whether the $48.38 had been paid to him or not. Mr. Harding left the city Saturday evening for a few days.

Deputy County Attorney Shorewell's opinion that in the event of Mr. Donohoe being able to explain his position satisfactorily Mr. Harding has placed himself in a bad light by accepting the $48.38 after it was expressly understood that the state was to pay it.

There is talk of the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners acting on the Donohoe case tonight.

Swenson furnished bonds and was released, and was about to depart to rejoin his wife in Nebraska when Deputy Marshal Petrie swooped down upon him and arrested him on the charge pending against him in the federal court.

MYSTERY OF INDIAN'S DEATH

Santee Ball Player Disappears and Two Reds are Arrested After Skeleton is Found.

News comes to Omaha that Pete Rouillard, a Santee Indian, disappeared March 22 and that nothing was heard of him until ten days ago, when a skeleton was found on a sandbar in the Missouri river east of the Winnebago agency, which was later identified to be that of Rouillard. When last seen alive he was in company with Thomas Lovjoy and another Indian, named Dupuis. Rouillard was known to have had about $60 in cash with him at the time of his disappearance.

A day or two following Lovjoy and Dupuis were in Decatur and each was spending money freely. The fact attracted some attention, because the two men were seldom known to have any money, and it was then suspected they may have known something of Rouillard's disappearance, but nothing was done in the matter. However, after the finding of Rouillard's body Lovjoy and Dupuis were arrested and examined, but nothing incriminating could be proven against them and they were released from custody last Monday.

The dead Indian was well-todo. He owned considerable land and was the heir to other lands. He was also a well known base ball player, being regarded as the crack player of the entire Santee tribe.
