

FIRST VISIT IN FIFTY YEARS

Dr. Sanchez of Detroit Views Omaha He Knew Half Century Ago.

AMAZED AT CHANGES TIME HAS BROUGHT

Venerable Visitor Heard Abraham Lincoln Make Famous Speech Clearing Old Friend's Son of Murder Charge.

The visit of Dr. H. Sanchez of Detroit, Mich., who is staying at the Paxton hotel, to Omaha is of unusual interest to him, as it brings him over a territory which he has not passed through since the early days. Dr. Sanchez has a reminiscence to relate of the '30s, when he first came to this section as a soldier, marching overland to Utah, where the Mormon troubles were in progress. That was in 1862 and the young man had been in this country but three years. He had struck westward into Illinois and enlisted there, but the trip still farther was ended abruptly at Council Bluffs, as peace in Utah had been declared.

Dr. Sanchez and his wife arrived in Omaha Thursday and he immediately tried to establish some connection between the big city he found here and the blank shores of the Missouri which he saw when a young man. He inquired about a village, where his regiment had camped for four months on the Iowa side, and which was the end of the march. It probably was Council Bluffs he had reference to, then known as Kanawville. Omaha, he said, he just never mentioned in those days. He was here again shortly after the civil war, but not even then was there much here to remember.

Saw Lincoln at Beardstown.

However, in spite of the interest Omaha people naturally take in stories about the early days of this neighborhood, Dr. Sanchez becomes even more interesting in the tales of his young days when he speaks of his life at Beardstown, Ill., where he settled to practice medicine, because it was there he saw Abraham Lincoln during the session of the circuit court, at the same table with him at the hotel, and is among the few still living who heard the great man's closing speech to the jury when he was defending young Anderson on a charge of murder.

Anderson and a companion named Metzger were charged with the murder of another young man. Metzger already had been sentenced to the penitentiary from Pekin, but a change of venue had been secured for Anderson to Cass county. Young Anderson's father was the man who, back in Sangamon county, had assisted Lincoln in his laborious knowledge-seeking, and Lincoln looked upon him much as a father. The old man was dead then, but when Lincoln heard of the trouble the son was in, he hastened to lend him aid and refused to accept any pay.

Dr. Sanchez tells how well he remembers, on entering the crowded court room, how Mrs. Anderson sat at one end of a long table, with Lincoln at the other, and how she seemed to annoy him greatly by loud and furious talking across the table of what she was going to do to the sheriff and everybody else.

Lawyer Could Not Talk.

"She was a tall, slim woman, about 40 years old, with red hair and freckles, and could talk any one's arm off. She was always talking of the trial, and at meals nothing else could be heard but her language. Lincoln never had a chance to talk, nor did the other lawyers. "I was not present during much of the trial, but a friend of mine told me when the time came for Lincoln's closing speech and I went over. I remember very well the trend of the lawyer's argument and its simplicity making it one of the best stories I have ever heard of the martyr president. This was but a short time after the expiration of Lincoln's term as state attorney for that district, and the trial drew an immense crowd. Lincoln recounted to a jury of young men and women jurors which he had selected, his close connection with the family of the accused, the kindness of the father, and the debt he was trying to repay by defending the son. He almost put each one of the jurors on trial in place of young Anderson, and when they all were told them as long as Metzger had already been sent to the penitentiary as the murderer, why send Anderson?"

Woman Hears Lincoln.

"It was perhaps less than fifteen minutes when the jury returned with the verdict 'not guilty,' and Mrs. Anderson turned toward Lincoln, threw her arms

AFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

James Garfield Arrested After Search of Several Months.

SUSPECTED OF SHOOTING F. N. CLARKE

Eluded the Officers at the Time, but Returns to His Old Haunts and Goes to Work in a Packing House.

The turning over of James Garfield, colored, to the Omaha police yesterday has recalled the persistent search which the South Omaha police made for him the time of the famous street car holdup and murder at the end of the Albright line. For a time the police believed him to be one of the gang which did the shooting of the unfortunate conductor, Edward Flury. The police did not succeed in locating him until he was about to take an eastern train, and it was too late to capture him. After crossing into Iowa all trace of Garfield was lost. Later it was found that he had no connection with the Albright tragedy, but a train of circumstances and some of the confessions of the three negroes implicated in the crime pointed to Garfield as one of the men who held up and shot F. N. Clarke at Eighteenth and Capitol avenue last spring.

Garfield worked in the same gang with Harrison Clark, the convicted murderer of Flury, and was on familiar terms with him. He was known as a bad character and his wife was implicated in robbing a man of $500 in the Omaha tender, but for this crime of his wife's that he was first thought to have disappeared. This was before the confessions of the other three negroes. A few days ago it was learned by Officer Eiseleider that Garfield was back in Armour's packing house. He was arrested as he left work Thursday evening and was turned over to Omaha authorities yesterday. It may be that no connection will be established with the shooting of Clarke, for it depends entirely on whether or not, and after that on whether the evidence will be strong enough in circumstance to substantiate the identification.

In addition to his suspected connection with the Omaha crime, Garfield is also wanted at Manhattan, Kan., where he broke jail April 20. This would indicate that as soon as he left South Omaha, March 11, he doubled, either at Council Bluffs or an eastern point, so as to bring up in Kansas. At Manhattan he was arrested for some petty crime, but he lost no time in breaking out of jail, probably because he feared he might be connected with the Omaha crime. A reward is offered for him in Manhattan.

Indian Skeleton Uncarved.

Last Wednesday afternoon the graders who are working in the vicinity of Twenty-second and U streets, unearthed a skeleton of an Indian which had been buried there when there was nothing but bare prairie on the site of Omaha. It has long been known that a burying ground existed in that locality, for at the time of the building of the Bohemian church several skeletons were discovered. Along with the skeleton last found were a number of trinkets such as are commonly worn by the race. Beads and arrow points and some little bells were found.

Several Attempts at Burglary.

A number of attempts at burglaries were reported to the South Omaha police yesterday morning. These attempts, so far as known, were successful. Early in the evening an attempt was made to force an entrance to the home of Mrs. Richard Gilchrist, 1218 North Twenty-sixth, by means of a rear window. The window was held in place by a prop and before it could be removed some six or seven of the people in the house were thought to have driven the prowlers away. They next visited the home of John F. Colvin at 305 E street and here, in the absence of the family, succeeded in getting in. In order to reach the window they carried a porch chair from the Gilchrist residence across the lot to the rear of the other. The family happened to return just in time to keep their house from being ransacked, as there were all signs of a busy exit. Several other residences described similar visitations. About the Gilchrist house there were a number of trinkets made with bare feet, which were of a size which would indicate that the burglars were boys rather than grown men.

Man for Damaged Hat.

Jacob Sperling's troubles began over a week ago when in a heated discussion in the place of business of Isaac Levy he is said to have used language such as to have provoked an assault. Before the assault landed on him, however, Casper Horwich interfered and as a result some violence occurred on the street. Horwich and Sperling were both arrested and Horwich was subjected to a fine for assault and battery. The whole quarrel arose over an optional sale of Sperling's shop, which deal was to have been closed in thirty days. As a guarantee the $29 in prospect, John Randolph, placed $29 in the hands of Isaac Levy. At the end of the time stipulated Levy declared he should receive $10 of the $29 for having kept it in his pockets for that length of time. Sperling objected strenuously to that method of banking, insisting that everyone would be a banker if a man paid interest at such a rate on money deposited. These objections led to the assault and the subsequent cases in court, in the latest of which he sues Horwich to recover damages for $4 because in the settlement Horwich was so careless as to plant his foot through the crown of Sperling's hat. Levy, after reconsideration, has placed the $29 in the hands of Justice Caldwell for Sperling.

Sunday Services.

Next Sunday morning Rev. R. L. Wheeler will deliver the second of his sermons on "Modern Infidelity." There will be music by the choir. In the evening Mrs. Lee Estelle and Mrs. E. B. Towle will speak on the merits and the work and needs of the church.

RECEIVER FOR WINCH ESTATE

Application Made by Three Proprietors for the Probate of the Will.

Application was made in district court Friday morning for the appointment of a receiver for the Seth F. Winch estate which has for a long time been involved in litigation in the courts. The receiver is asked for by Stella Dickinson, Frank W. Foster and Abraham L. Reed, proponents for the probate of the will.

With the application are affidavits by Mrs. Miranda J. Steen, who was Mrs. Winch, and others, asserting that the real property belonging to the estate is not properly cared for and is being allowed to run down. It is also asserted that taxes on the property are not paid. It is alleged in the petition that the defendants, Evira M. Aldrich, Emma S. Oatman, Irene Sweet and Alfred W. Sweet, now have possession of the property and are collecting and using the rentals. No administrator or other person has been appointed by the court to take charge of the property. At least $5,000, it is said, has been collected. The petition asks for the appointment of Henry G. Jordan as receiver with power to collect rents and pay taxes and repair the buildings. The hearing will be had next Tuesday morning.

The immediate cause of the application was the granting of a new trial in the suit to probate the will, which promises to involve the case in litigation for some time.

"As to the Detective Donohoe case I have turned it over to the legal department of the state."

LAST OF STREET GAS LAMPS

August Will Mark Final Extinguishment of the Old Lights.

August 1 will see the end of gasoline street lighting in Omaha, according to the announcement of City Electrician Michaelson. By that date the 300 new electric lamps ordered for the suburbs will be ready for service and will be turned on. The gasoline lighting contract expired last December, but the service has been made at the old rates pending the building of pole lines and the installation of electricity.
