day, and as she blushed and laughingly answered "No," every one in the car looked and wondered what book company she was agent for.

The broad veranda of the Field club and the Country club and the informal Wednesday luncheons at these resorts are excellent places to hear what is going on in society, for here the women congregate in little groups and discuss topics of every description, telling all the latest gossip and everything they have heard and seen in their rounds.

The departure of a large number of young people the last week for the mountains and lakes has had its effect on the dinner and luncheon lists at the Country and Field clubs.

At the Country club last evening there were not many dinners, and most of these were small ones. The largest was that given by Miss Marton Hughes, who entertained twenty-two guests.

Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Hull gave a dinner of twelve covers, their guests being Miss Foster of Lincoln, Mrs. Stevens of Denver, Mrs. Howard Badridge, Mr. Harry McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. G. Benson, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Coles and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Lewis.

PHIL AARONS POSES AS BRYAN One of Brandeis' Buyers Causes Mild Sensation in Paris Cafe.

Paris in the height of its social activity is always most interesting, and the Brandeis buyers who are now abroad write that they have been extremely fortunate in seeing the French capital during one of its most brilliant periods.

In his letter Mr. McKnight speaks of an amusing incident that occurred in a Paris cafe. W. J. Bryan had been in Paris and everyone was anxious to see him, but, of course, few of the citizens had done so, although all were on the lookout and almost any American might be under suspicion until he said absolutely that he was W. J. Bryan.

REAL THRILLER AT KRUG PARK Manager Cole Secures Diavolo for a Week in Death-Defying Feat.

Manager W. W. Cole has secured a novel attraction to open this week's engagement at Krug park today. It is what may be aptly termed "a thriller." The professional performer, the great Diavolo, has evolved an act that is a case of "shaking dice with death" every time he undertakes it.
