Government Looking Into Relation of Railroad to Local Monopoly.

CONVICTED DEALER ON THE STAND

He Says Ann Arbor Railroad Controlled Ice Company for Years.

CUTTERS ARE CARRIED FREE OF CHARGE

Ice Company Also Uses Railroad Real Estate Rent Free.

FORMER PRESIDENT BURT TESTIFIES

He Says It Is Not Unusual for Transportation Companies to Make Low Rates to Build Up Industries.

TOLEDO, Aug. 14.—The government inquiry into the relations between the railroad entering Toledo and the ice companies shipping over these lines began today.

Joseph A. Miller, manager of the Toledo Ice and Coal company, and one of the men sentenced to the workhouse for conspiracy in restraint of trade, was the first witness. He testified that previous to five years ago, when he became manager of the ice company, he was purchasing agent for the Ann Arbor railroad; but while an agent of the road he had sold ice for the ice company and was paid by the road, and that Wellington R. Burt, president of the Ann Arbor road, and Harry Ashley, general manager, were directors of the ice company and that practically all the stock of the ice company was owned by the railroad people.

W. A. Bradley, superintendent of the Ann Arbor railroad and a stockholder in the Toledo Ice and Coal company, when asked by Commissioner Clements how he could justify the act of his road in giving favors to one ice company and withholding them from another, frankly answered that such acts could not be justified, but that he had nothing to do with the arrangements.
