LABORERS WANT THEIR PAY!

Men Ask Park Board to Withhold Fund Due Their Employers.

Petition Renewed to Add Cut-Off Lake to Omaha's Park System-Oil Tar for Dust and Weeds.

Attorney W. M. Giller on behalf of aborers employed on the work of cutting down the bill at Eighteenth and Farnam streets appeared before the park board yesterday afternoon and asked it to withhold certain funds due the contractors from the board for dirt hauled to the boulevard in order that they might be applied to the payment of claims for labor of Mr. Giller's clients. It appears that the contractors who originally had the job have left their help without pay. The amount involved is $216.72. The matter was referred to the finance committee. A committee from the West Leavenworth Improvement club appeared before the board and asked that some action be taken toward either parking or conby the Park board on Thirty-fifth street between Leavenworth and Pacific. Asthe board has the matter under consideration and that steps will be taken to improvement of the locality and asses it back on the property to improve it. J. F. Wilson on behalf of the Omaha Federation of Improvement clubs addressed the board in behalf of a proposition to provide three small parks in addition to the present park system, one to be located on the Patrick property at Twentyfourth and Lake streets, one near Twentieth and Harney streets and the other on Thirteenth street somewhere south of the rallway tracks. He thought that in time public baths could be provided at each of these small parks for the benefit of those who could not avail themselves of private baths. He stated that the organization which he represented included ove: 1,300 property owners Omaha. The matter was referred to the committee on grounds and improvements. Cut-Off Lake for Park.

Prof. John E. Wigman of the manual training department of the high school made a strong plea before the board for making an immediate attempt to acquire property about Cut-Off lake that it might be utilized for park purposes.

George H. Waring of the Omaha Gas mpany addressed the board upon the matter of oil tar as a dust layer and weed destroyer and its efficiency as a pavement for boulevards. He sald two blocks of boulevard already had been treated by the process near Krug's brewery with but two applications and that its success had been more than demonstrated. A block had been also similarly treated on Guthrie have returned to Omaha after an and Thirty-fourth streets with similar Woolworth avenue between Thirty-third SUCCESS.

The board finally adopted a resolution authorizing the gas company to sprinkle club to the paving at or near the park. The remainder of the session was devoted to current miscellaneous business of no general importance, including the allowance of sundry bills and authorizing certain sidewalks and cross walk improve-

CRUSHED BY RUNAWAY CARS

Michlevous Boys Responsible for Wreck and the Death of William Peach, 2230 South Twenty-seventh street, aged 57 years, was killed by runaway freight cars on the Union Pacific tracks at Twenty-second street at 5:50 Peach is believed to be the fault of boys. who, it is said, have been in the habit of lossening cars at the elevator, farther west, and allowing them to run down th steep grade at that point. Four cars were running at a fast rate down the grade, and Peach, walking beside the track, stepped in front of them to avoid a train on

Peach was employed as a foreman for the Sheridan Coal company, and when run down was on his way home from work The wheels of all four cars passed over his abdomen and arm, practically cutting him in two. M. Campbell, 2316 Hickory street, a friend of Peach, hurried to his aid, but found no signs of life beyond the twitching of the body. Earl Fothergill, 1966 Center street, was the only one who saw the accident

Coroner Brailey was notified and the remains were taken to the morgue. Peach leaves a wife and four adult children, two of whom are married. When the runaway cars had passed over the body of Peach they crashed into a pictorial features continue to be of high work train standing on the tracks unloading sand. A terrific roar was the result and a number of cars were splintered and piled into a heap.

LOVE FEAST FOR SHALLENBERGER

Local Democrats Show Their Candidate for Governor Honors. .

Love feast was exactly the right name to apply to the gathering of democrats in O'Brien's cafe. After an hour at dinner the democratic standard bearer and his local admirers spent an hour and a half passing compliments on each other, heaping ns upon the party and prophesying victory for it in Nebraska wis fall and overwhelming victory in 1908. Mr. Shallenberger spoke for twenty min-mutual interests of the eastern and western portions of the state. Nature had wiped said, by making millions of bushels of grain to grow west of it, and now the dem ocratic party had wiped out the line politically by making him its candidate for overnor. He dwelt at length on the mutual nterests of east and west Omaha depend ing on the western counties for grain and cattle and the west depending upon Omaha as a great cash market for its products. All agricultural people should be ranged or the side of democracy, he said, as against those principles of another party which had made more millionaires in the United States in the last twenty-five years than any other country had ever developed in 5,000 years, and he had faith that Nebrasks is coming to the democratic col umn now and forever. On the subject of

Other speakers who contributed to the feast of compliments were: C. J. Smythe. Ed P. Smith, Euclid Martin, W. S. Shoemaker, Mr. Elliott and E. E. Howell, W. O. Gilbert acted as tonatmaster.

The book will sell and be read-once.

Apropos of the various conventions and caucuses being held for political nominations, good politics is a leading topic in the September issue of The World Today. This structing a lake on the property owned fifteen-cent magazine still keeps well to the front. "The Regeneration of Minneapolis" by James Linn Nash, is a well-illustrated surances were given the committee that article detailing the advantages that have come to that city by the reforms instituted by Mayor Jones. The closing of the saloons condemn certain adjacent property for the on Sunday and the reformation of the police force are particularly narrated. "Go /erning Cities by Commissions," written by C. Arthur Williams, tells of the new method adopted by Galveston, Nashville and other cities.

> The Red Book magazine for September may well be called a Maude Adams-"Peter Pan" edition, as it contains, in addition to twelve admirable stories, fourteen art portraits of Miss Adams in the part of Peter, together with a lavishly illustrated article by Acton Davies on the play itself.

Afnalee's for September has a table of contents that is remarkable for its variety. Its, fiction is not of the kind that comes all from the same mold; it is of the bes literary quality and will suit every degree of taste. The novelette, "His Little Partner." by William McLeod Raine, is a Montana story; not the usual one of ranch life but a romance in which Mr. Raine has utilized the extraordinary facts which have made the history of the state unique. It is a love story with a vivid atmosphere of political and industrial intrigue, dramatic and absorbing, but not in the least sensational. W. A. Frazer has another racing story, "The Changeling," perhaps the best in the series, told in Mr. Fraser's happlest vein. The number also contains the third installment of "Audrey Craven." by May Sinclair, whose book, "The Divine Fire," is one of the big books of the decade. If there were nothing else of merit in the magazine, this story would give it a cistinction so lacking in current periodicals. Robert E. MacAlarney has a story of tremendous strength in "The Lesson," which he tells, most realistically, some experiences of a young physician in New York. A very effective sea story is "The Woolworth avenue from near the Field Ace High," by F. Walworth Brown; the interest promised in the novelty of the title loses nothing in the telling, One of the most charming stories in the number is an idyl of the Berkshire Hills, by Walter Eaton, entitled "When Pippa Stopped." It is a beautiful love story with an atmosphere of the woods and hills. Another tale of outdoors, but different from the fore going in scene and treatment, is "The Silver Doctor," by Edith Macvane. The title will tempt fishermen, but there is in it a deep interest for those who do not fish. Con stance Smedley and Pearl Humphrey collab-Achilles," which has a special appeal to women. Anne Rittenhouse has a fine essay on "Aristocratic White Sulphur" and Carolyn Rapelyea one on "American Complexitles." The poetry is far above the average, o'clock yesterday afternoon. The death of and is by Margaret Houston, Charlotte Becher, John Curtis Underwood, Clinton Scollard, J. Lee Matherson and Frank Dempster Sherman.

"The Story of Montana," the great serial for the year, begun in the August Mc-Clure's, gains impetus as it goes along. From its striking picture of the early days of the commonwealth, it runs to the development of the mining industry, the picturesque conditions and enormous fortunes which resulted, and the bitte feud that arose between Marcus Daly and William A. Clark. The story of the quarrel, of Clark's first attempts to reach the United States senate, of his spectacula defeat, and of the Montana capital fight is told in the September McClure's. It makes one of the most interesting page-in American history. Abundance and a variety characteriz the contents of the Home Magazine for September. There is a delightful diversity of topics, and each is nicely handled, and completely, while "Creatures That Once Were Men," a story by Maxim Gorky, translated from the Russian by J. K. M. Shirazi, will not prove to be a pleasing book for the majority of readers, inasmuch as it deals with the degraded of human society, those who have made life a failure. The writer shows that each of these degraded beings has traits and impulses like our own and nonor of A. C. Shallenberger last night at compels us to admit our relationship of a common humanity. The book in no way inspires the reader to better things. Published by Funk & Wagnalls.

Tales, in the September number, goes step farther in justifying its sub-title, "a magazine of the world's best fiction"that is to say, the best fiction of the other ates on the prosperity of Nebraska and the haif of the world, for it publishes nothing but translations from the European and Oriental languages. It skims the cream out the dead line of the 100th meridian, he from that part of the literary world and renders it into the best possible English for American readers.

These flags have four stars and the inscription: "Let Iowa women vote. Add another star to the flag of free states." The flags are fastened to small birch sticks and are attractive little souvenirs.

Members of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in the northern as well as the southern chapters, have been very much exercised of late over a misunderstanding that has become prevalent regarding their organization becoming auxillary to a new organization known as the Southern Industrial and Educational association. The Daughters have long been working for an improvement in educational conditions in the south, but in the main, descendents of confederate veterans have been beneficiaries of their efforts. The new association, which was organized by Mrs. Martha S. Gielow, who is its president general, would extend these advantages just as far as possible, and in this interest Mrs. Gielow and her secretary have recently traveled extensively in the east and south, endeavoring to secure support of other societies of women and men. Mrs. Gielow suggested that the Daughters of the Confederacy become auxiliary to her organization in the educational work, which she presented to several chapters, and misunderstanding their approval of her work for consent to her proposition actually persuaded a chapter or two to join. The general organization is much opposed to becoming auxiliary to any other association, however, and after some investigation has considerable criticism to offer the methods of the new association. Now those chapters of Daughters that actually became members claim that they were misintified with the Southern Industrial and Educational association. The presidentgeneral of the Daughters has recently issued a circular letter disclaiming any af fillation with the new organization and presidents of several of the state divisions have sent out similar circulars to their

Baron Rosen, Russian ambassador, has sent to the Department of State, from his summer headquarters at Magnella, Mass., the following invitation to Amerian women:

The permanent committee for the advancement of the technical instruction of women at St. Petersburg, with a view to increasing the pecuniary resources of its school, is organizing, under the high patronage of Her Imperial Highness Princess Eugenie Maximilianovna of Oldenberg, an international exposition leather, pelts, feathers, down, and their products, to be held at St. Petersburg in November of this year, for a period of our months. COMPANY I OUT AT KRUG PARK soldiers Are Giving a Fine Exhibition Each Evening to Large Crowds.

The military tournament at Krug park this week, given by Company I, Nebrasks National guard, is drawing a steady increasing attendance. The sham battle is the great card on the program and the one of last evening was much more effective than the ones of the two preceding evenings. The marching and volley firing shows marked improvement with each succeeding day of the tournament. The climax in the assault on the "Old Mill," culminating in a fine fireworks display from the roof of the building, won great praise. The reproduction of a soldier's life in camp proves of absorbing interest to a great many camp visitors every evening.
