FINISH FIGHT ON TRUSTS

Government Preparations for the Fall Campaign Against Combines.

ACTIVITY ALL ALONG THE LINE PLANNED

Creasures of the Law Must Obey the Law or Take the Consequences—Greatly Increased Duty of the Judicial Department.

The "trust busting" campaign of the federal government will be renewed with increased vigor within a few weeks. September, which brings the federal courts into regular session, will see renewed activity all along the line. Many of the pending cases will come up for trial in the fall; indictments against alleged offenders will be sought in several judicial districts, and the government's forces of investigation will continue to seek for information on which to base prosecutions. Attorney General Moody, after a long rest up in New England, will soon be back at his desk to stay, and his coming will be the signal for a forward movement. It is assumed that the Department of Justice will continue to seek for information on which to base prosecutions. ### Fight Against Standard Oil.

The fight against the Standard Oil Company is the most important the government is waging. It has not been allowed to lag during the hot weather. During the vacation season the federal grand juries—at Jamestown, N. Y., Cleveland and Chicago—have been sifting evidence presented by the government's agents. It is an unusual thing for the Department of Justice to be compelling grand juries to sit during the months of July and August. The department's explanation is that it did not want the evidence in hand to get "cold"; evidently it felt that it was a good time to get the juries to work while the public mind was riveted on revelations of the investigation conducted by the Bureau of Corporations. The popular impression is that the government will not find it easy to cripple the oil trust. Unquestionably the Department of Justice realizes that it will meet with many obstacles. But it proposes to make a heroic effort to inflict punishment. Later in the year all the evidence collected by the Bureau of Corporations on which the legal advisers of the government believe indictments and convictions can be secured will be laid before the grand juries. It is the private opinion of attorneys connected with these prosecutions that if the government cannot severely punish the Standard Oil Company the evidence gathered by Commissioner Garfield will not be worth while ever again to attempt to punish the corporation. The Department of Justice is forewarned that the trust proposes to fight and fight hard against any punishment being inflicted. No one identified with the present fight against the company expects to witness definite results this fall. If it is a fight to the finish, as it surely will be, it may take several years to determine the final outcome.

While the Department of Justice is endeavoring to secure some cover ribs, indictments against the Standard Oil Company it will also be engaged in the trial of numerous anti-trust cases that are already in court.

These trials will probably consume much of the time of federal courts in some of the districts during the fall and winter. The cases are pretty well scattered over the country. The Wholesale Grocers' association is being prosecuted in the southern district of Florida. The members of the association have filed answers, and the case has been continued from time to time. It will be heard at the next term of the court.

Combines on the Carpet.

Possibly there will be some further steps in what is known as the Beef trust case at Chicago. As most persons will recall, the federal grand jury at Chicago returned an exhaustive investigation, returned indictments against numerous individuals and also against a large number of corporations. The court sustained the plea so far as the individual defendants were concerned, and overruled their writs respect to the corporations. In this condition the case rests. The government was nonplussed over the ruling of Judge Humphreys and has not moved a wheel since. If it has a program mapped out it is keeping it quiet. The Terminal Railroad association at St. Louis is on the rack in the federal court for the eastern district of Missouri. The suit is to enjoin the association, the bridge companies and the railroad and carries crossing the river at St. Louis, from carrying on an alleged and unlawful combination entered into between them to operate the Eads bridge and the Merchants' bridge as a common agency of interstate commerce, and to suppress competition. The issues in the case are about made up and it is the expectation that it will be decided some time next fall. Over in Hawaii the government is pressing proceedings in court to restrain the operation of an alleged unlawful combination to control the trade in lumber in that territory. In the Hawaii court there is also pending a case against the Beef trust.

The department hopes to bring the fight against the Tobacco trust to a final issue this coming fall or winter.

These Tobacco trust cases grew out of an investigation by the federal grand jury in the southern district of New York of the American Tobacco company and the McAndrews & Forbes company, believed to be violating the anti-trust laws. The officers of the companies refused to obey the subpoena, or to answer questions put to them. The circuit court found them guilty of contempt and committed them until they should produce their books and answer questions. The supreme court last spring held that they were not to be held in contempt. Two months ago a grand jury returned indictments against the McAndrews & Forbes company, of the J. S. Young company, a corporation of Maine, and Karl Jungbluth and Howard E. Young. Proceedings against the Virginia-Carolina Chemical company, alleged to be a trust, are pending in several southern states. The federal grand jury for the Middle District of Tennessee, on information furnished by the Department of Justice, returned indictments last May against thirty-one corporations and twenty-five individuals engaged in the fertilizing business in the states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Arkansas and Tennessee, charging them with conspiracy. It was alleged that the trust fixed the price of fertilizers in the territory mentioned, and that the various corporations apportioned the trade among themselves according to an agreed percentage. The cases are pending. The issues are now being made up and it is the expectation that they will be disposed of this fall.

Many other smaller trust prosecutions are under way. The bureau of corporations is constantly on the hunt for evidence of violations of the anti-trust laws, and the Interstate Commerce commission has within the last six months gathered a great deal of evidence which is now being studied by the Department of Justice with the view of starting prosecutions. The investigation last spring of underbidding at New York and in other cities uncovered evidence on which indictments may be asked. It is possible that many cases brought under the Elkins anti-rebate act. Most of these will come to trial at the fall term of the federal court in the various districts.

This "trust busting" campaign is making an enormous amount of work for the Department of Justice. Incidentally, it is bringing employment and fat fees to some lawyers who are employed as special counsel. When President Roosevelt inaugurated his anti-trust campaign in 1903 Congress appropriated $200,000 with which to conduct the fight. About half that sum is unexpended. The law firm of Judson & Harmon of Cincinnati received a fee of $10,000 for the advice which President Roosevelt and Attorney General Moody refused to follow in dealing with the Standard Oil Company.

"Immortal Truths." The late senator William B. Bate, of Tennessee, was a member of the Confederate army and never quite reconciled himself to the defeat of the south, although he was an able and efficient senator. Soon after he came to the senate he formulated a set of rules which he called "Rules for My Proper Legislative Guidance." Whenever a proposition came up about which he was undecided, he would take the printed slip containing these rules from his pocket and study it carefully. "Bate," said a colleague one day, "what is that slip of paper to which you refer so frequently?" "That," replied Senator Bate, "is a little reminder of my beliefs on constitutional questions."

"Where did you get it? Think it out yourself?" "No, sir," replied Bate, with much dignity; "I found most of those immortal truths in the constitution of the Confederate States of America."

Good Indians Meet.

Congressman Llewellyn Powers of Maine, besides being a millionaire, is a man of striking appearance. Being tall and black hair long, he bears some resemblance to the aborigines of this continent. One day, while traveling on a Maine railroad, where "Indians and ministers" ride for half fare, Mr. Powers met a member of the Passamaquoddy tribe in the smoking car and started in to question the copper-colored constituents as to his manner of living and how he liked the tribal relation in Maine. After some minutes of talk Mr. Powers asked, "By the way, which of the two tribes do you belong to?" "Myself bin all Passamaquoddy," replied the Indian. "What tribe you bin?" "Before the Boston drummers came in, I bin one of the Passamaquoddy, but Mr. Powers discovered that he had urgent business which called him to the Pullman.

Humors of the Law.

One day as John W. Mugridge, the lawyer, and Judge Minot were walking along the street in Concord, New Hampshire, together, Mr. Mugridge, in his apocryphal voice said: "Judge, lets go into partnership. You furnish the capital and I'll furnish the brains." The judge quickly pulled a two-cent piece from his pocket, and holding it in the palm of his hand, said to Mugridge: "Very well; cover that, John! Cover that!" An old lawyer had finished recently about General Ben Butler said: "Ben Butler was a terror and torment to the judges. On one occasion Judge Sanger, having been bullied and badgered out of all patience, petulantly asked: 'What does the counsel suppose I am on this bench for?'" "Scratching his head a minute, Butler replied, 'Well, I confess your honor's got me there.'"

TREPOFF SAID TO BE ILL

Rumor Attributes Illness to Recent Attempt to Poison Him.

STOLYPIN SAID TO HAVE CZAR'S FAVOR

Officials at Archangel Authorized to Permit Political Prisoners to Leave Russia if They Will Stay Away.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 1.—Reports are persistently circulated that General Trepoff, commandant of the palace, is so seriously ill that his life is in danger.

General Trepoff, according to reports from Archangel, is very high in favor with the emperor, who declines to listen to suggestions of the premier's enemies. The police claim that they have obtained an important clue to the headquarters of the terrorists' organization. They say that a man who was arrested at Peterhof in connection with the assassination of General Min, hastily attempted to swallow a piece of paper, which, when recovered, proved to be orders in connection with attempts to be made on the life of high personages. The Novoe Vremya says it has been established beyond a doubt that one of the men who attempted to assassinate Premier Stolypin August 23 was a Jew. The police of Archangel and other northern provinces have received instructions to permit the political prisoners exiles there to leave Russia on condition that they do not return for two years.

Fighting at Libau.

LIBAU, Sept. 1.—An organized attack was made last night upon a detachment of troops engaged in transporting a number of prisoners away from this district. Fighting occurred and a general alarm was sounded by the garrison. When reinforcements arrived on the scene of the disturbance the troops fired indiscriminately into the crowd, killing eight and wounding fifty persons. Among the killed was a mother who has a babe at her breast.

MOSCOW, Sept. 1.—Social revolutionists today issued a proclamation, in which they claimed credit for the murder of General Min, but denied responsibility for the attempt on the life of Premier Stolypin.

WARSAW, Sept. 1.—Over 2,000 arrests were made during last night's police sweep of the city. Many complaints have been made by the prisoners of police brutality.

Bee Want Ads Bring Results

How do they ever get through those high corn fields of Iowa to gather corn?" asked H. B. Nesbit of the Pittsburg Press, who had never been west before. "I saw some corn that you could not gather with an ordinary stepladder."

Charles S. Smith, the Associated Press representative, is well known in Omaha as he did his first work on The Bee, and is remembered by many of the present staff. He is a nephew of Z. T. Lindsey of this city. Mr. Smith took a run onto the viaduct to look over the jobbing district as his train waited to change engines and was greatly surprised at the vast number of new buildings in sight.

All of the members of the party expressed great sorrow at the death of Edward Rosewater and had prepared resolutions, which were sent to The Bee, as well as personal letters to members of the family, who were known to most of them.

Father Took Son's Whipping.

The boy had misbehaved, as he often did, and his father called him to account. "Son," said the father, "I hate to lick you, but some one must get a whipping for what you've done."

The Boy Whipped a Little.

"Suppose," said the father, "that I take the whipping for you?" The boy laughed at the idea, but the father took down a dog whip, called a friend who was visiting at the house, explained the situation to him, and then requested the visitor to use the whip on the boy.

The father wore a long-tailed coat and the visitor hit the tails of that coat in great style.

At the first crack of that whip the boy was whiplashed. At the second he was clapping, hitting, and kicking the man with the whip.

"Don't whip my papa! Don't whip him!" he cried. "Whip me! Oh, whip me!"

That was a year ago. Since then that boy has never done anything seriously wrong.—New York Press.

Bachelor and Diamond King.

Alfred Beit, the South African millionaire who died recently, was a bachelor of quiet and retiring nature and when not occupied with his vast business enterprises generally busied himself in increasing the valuable collection of art treasures in his palatial residence in Park Lane, London.

In connection with this Park Lane house an interesting story is told. Mr. Beit became a ground tenant of the late Duke of Westminster, who made many provisions about the plans. At last a polite letter was sent to the millionaire couched somewhat in the following terms: "The duke of Westminster wishes it to be understood that he expects Mr. Beit to spend the sum of £10,000 as a minimum upon the house."

In reply to which Mr. Beit begged leave to inform his grace that he intended to spend the sum mentioned on his estates.

A Jolly Good Fellow.

There is no more general favorite in the House of Commons than T. P. O'Connor, who, though severe in public speech, is essentially good-natured and friendly in private life. "T. P." is as familiar with the tory aristocrat as with the representative of labor. He chats with Mr. Balfour and he links arms with the prime minister.

In fact, he is on terms of friendship and intimacy with every fellow member of the house—except one—Joseph Chamberlain, whom he once denounced as Judas for having, apparently at least, betrayed the Irish members in connection with certain legislation.

"How do they ever get through those
