OPENING OF BOYD THEATER Everything is New on Interior Bu the Faces of Popular Attnches.

While Nordin's orchestra played its select tions Monday night hundreds of people passed through the Boyd theater and expressed admiration at the splendid changes wrought in the appearance of the already eautiful play house during the summer Every change was for the better, every change made for the beauty of the place. The old tapestries are gone, the old carpet is gone, the old chairs are gone. All have been replaced by new ones. From the soft green carpet to the gold decorated boxes there has been a clean sweep, and the new colors blend to make a most delightful

But while the house has changed the old familiar faces are still there. Mr. Burgess was on hand to greet the callers, so was Ed J. Monaghan, the manager, as pleasant looking as the house, and so was Ralph Hayward, the head doorkeeper who, during fifteen years with Mr. Burgess, has grown like him in nature, which is con sidered a compliment; and so was Parnell than ever before. Knock Over Telephone in Hurry and Central Hears the Noise, but Does Not Know

Jacob Klein, Twenty-sixth and N streets, South Omaha, was loser by about $500 in cash and checks Monday night from the robbery of his safe. Burglars entered his wholesale liquor house through the rear door, tipped over the safe and broke a hole through the bottom with chisels. The job was one of the easiest which might fall to the lot of a burglar. There is no way for a watchman to get a view of the build-ing. The front of the room is filled with barrels and the back door opens into a narrow passage. It was through the rear that the entrance was effected. A window was tried first, and then a panel was knocked out of the door and the lock was forced. The safe was an easy one.

The bottom was protected by one thin plate, which was pried up with ease. Under was a layer of potter's clay about three inches thick. This was backed out with chisels with case. Inside and constituting the bottom of the cavity, was a thin plate of steel, which was cut through, Over $400 in cash was there and the balance was in checks in the safe. The checks were largely Union Pacific pay checks, in small denomination. The bartender lost $500 in checks and paper; but the payment was stopped on all of them and no loss is anticipated. It is unlucky that a chance of catching the robbers in the act was overlooked. In tipping over the safe the men knocked the telephone off the deak thus opening the line to the central sta-Central heard the safe fall as it went over and afterwards heard the blows which were struck on the bottom to force the steel plate off. But she thought it was someone working in the building and did not give warning to the police. She connected the incident with the discovery of the robbery, which was made early Tuesday morning. The time, according to her, was about 1:30 p. m. As yet the police have not secured the perpetrators of the crime, though Detective P. H. Shields says he has a good lead.

WELSH PLEADS NOT GUILTY Weather Man Says He Didn't Know or Say Anything About a Frost.

It is freezing in Yellowstone park, and there is frost in Arizons, but Mr. Welsh, the weather man, is very much worried. In fact, he is receiving callers in his office on top of the federal building. His troubles are like the troubles of the ice man-they are many and they are coming in great bunches. And the worst part of it all is Mr. Welsh is not to blame, and he says so himself. Of course it was all caused by that frost which he is said to have predicted for Monday night.

Mr. Weish didn't predict any frost for Monday night and he has his weather report to prove it. The weather report reads: "Fair and cooler tonight and Tuesday." Here is how it all happened;

Over at the Grain exchange, so Mr. Welsh said, a message was received that frosts were a "possibility" in certain districts, including portions of Nebraska. The grain men telephoned to the weather man. The weather man admitted there were possibilities of frost. The temperature indicates that. 'But Mr. Welsh did not predict there would be frost and neither did he suggest people to get out their winter clothes. But he just as well might have predicted
