While hunting for horses for points a day or so ago Harold Smith, living on Mill street, was struck by one of the shoes of a team of horses. According to the big posters placed about town there was to be a shoot in the morning, horse races, automobile races and a base ball afternoon. There will, however, be no horse races as Mayor Macrae and Chief of Police Richmond notified the promoters of the "grand tournament" that the feature of the program would have to be eliminated. They were told in plain language that the city administration would not stand for horse racing for purses on the Sabbath.

When the affair was first planned, it was the understanding of Mayor Macrae and Chief Richmond that it merely intended to have a few roadster matches between horses belonging to the members of the club, but when the big posters announced that running races with "liberal purses" were to be features of the day's sports the board of trustees and the chief executive and the chief of police resulted in the mandate being issued that no horse races for purses went in Council Bluffs on the Sabbath.

The "grand tournament of sporting events" were deeply charged with the spirit of the other features would be pulled off as advertised.

Probating of Old Will. Twenty years ago the will of William Bauerkemper was filed for probate in the district court, but it was not until yesterday that it was admitted to probate on application of the widow, to whom the entire estate belonged. The signature of the testator was identified by the witness named as executrix under the instrument.

The will, dated December 4, 1886, bore the signature of William Bendtopf, Frederick Sperling and Hermann Kracht, as witnesses. All three have since died and it was necessary before the will could be admitted to probate yesterday that the signatures of the three witnesses be identified. Peter Tholl testified to the signatures of Bendtopf and Kracht, while Henry Sperling testified to that of his father, Frederick Sperling.

At the time the will was filed, J. J. Shea was clerk of the district court. The records show that notice of publication was made in regular form in the since defunct Council Bluffs Globe, but for some reason the proceedings stopped there and no effort was made to have the will admitted to probate until a few days ago when the widow filed her application.

Fixing up on Street Fair. At a meeting of the street fair and carnival committee yesterday reports showed that the attendance this year was larger than that of any previous fair. The committee is not yet in a position to know what the receipts and disbursements for this year will amount to, as there are still some collections to make and some bills to pay. There is every reason to believe, however, that the profits will be satisfactory and compare favorably with those of former years. This was the first year the fair was ever held without soliciting contributions from business men and others.

A detailed statement of every item of receipts and expense is being prepared by the committee and when completed and audited it will be published. As previously announced the money derived from the street fair and carnival, after certain payments to charitable and other organizations, is to be devoted to the use by the Commercial club in furthering its work of securing new industries for Council Bluffs.

We sell the Royal Road Cross base burner. Come in and see that Kellips grate. Always pleased to show you Swains & Mauer, 326-28 Broadway.

Matters in District Court. A settlement was reached in the district court yesterday before the case was brought to trial in the suit of Mrs. Emma L. Norman against John A. Norman, her husband. By the terms of the settlement Mrs. Norman is to have the ownership of the homestead at 1829 1/2 Fifth avenue and $1,000 in cash by October 1. If the cash is not forthcoming by that date Mrs. Norman will be given a judgment for the amount against the husband's farm in Mills county, upon which attachment proceedings were brought about a year ago.
