Owing to the glare of the lights it has been found impossible to give the navy pictures on the Ak-Sar-Ben rounds, and they have been moved to the west side of the post office building. They till be given there free to the public every tight except Sunday, when they will be taken into one of the parks, probably Hans-com. The pictures show scenes of navy life and are declared to be exceptionally good. They are provided by Uncle Sam, and so there is only one show on the road and by noon Thursday the exhibit should it will probably be a long time before they are complete.

Hundreds of concessionaires are waiting around the office of the superintendent of essions in the hope that some available space may be found, but it is no use. All space has been taken. By the new den the space is used much more consminsily than heretofore. In former yearn the space on the northwest corner of Elghteenth and Douglas streets, in the triangle, has been practically a blank exthe for the booths around the edges. Visitors Flock to Hendquarters, Taxing Pacilities of Entertainment. No place in Omaha is feeling the effect of the crowd attracted to the city by the carnival more than the Young Women's Christian association headquarters. The rooms in the Paxton block, inadequate under normal circumstances to the needs of the several thousand working women of the city who patronise its rest and funch rooms, have been taxed this week by the additional crowd of out-of-town somen shoppers and sightseers to the extent seriously of inconveniencing the regular patrons, women employed in the down town stores and offices, who have but the limited hour. This crowd continues to increams each day, as the association rooms afford practically the only since in the city where tired women may go for rest and refreshment. The couches in the rest rooms are filled and scores of packages and baggage are left in the rooms for safe keeping. Six hundred and fifty-one lunches were served Monday noon and about 700 Wednesday, the women waiting in a line that part of the time extended nearly twice the length of the dining room and necessitated the business women going else-where for their lunches. But this is an annual occurrênce and but another proof of Omaha's peed of a Young Women's Christian association building, properly equipped to provide for the business women and the hundreds of women from out in the state who come to the city for

Matter Discussed by Superintendent Davidson and Buard Members. Superintendent Davidson of the public chools and members of the Board of Education are discussing the wisdom of closing the public schools next Tuesday, which has been designated "Omaha day" and on which day the industrial parade will be given. Insamuch as the mayor and Samson have suggested a general suspension of business that day, it is thought the schools will be closed. The matter will be brought up at the meeting of the school board next Monday evening.

Europe proves that our tax on real estate, imperfect as it is in practice, has been of enormous value in our development and prosperity. European cities derive very little revenue from the value of land and are waking up to the necessity of following our example. Paris has recently adopted a small land value tax in place of the "octrol," or duty on goods brought into the city, and German cities, which, fortunately, have greater powers of local

"octrol," or duty on goods brought into the city, and German cities, which, fortunately, have greater powers of local self-government than American cities, are one after the other adopting small taxes on land values for economic rather than revenue reasons. In England the present ministry is committed to such a tax as a matter of party policy.

If land were assessed at its market value, as the law directs, and buildings were not overassessed, the profit now gained by retaining worn-out buildings on iots needed for improvement, or by putting up one-story stores as taxpayers, instead of buildings suited to the site, will be materially reduced. Taxes on buildings will be less and homes will be better and cheaper. The increased contribution of the tax on land will relieve the burden of taxes which check production, increase the cost of goods, reduce the opportunities for employment, and thus tend to lower wages. We have pointed out that unnecessary streets should not be opened. They are opened because the vacant lot industry is profitable. The smaller the profit in withholding land from use, the fewer will he the unnecessary streets. If the city is, compact, lots not immediately needed for building will not have a fictious value and will be utilized to advantage for market gardens. With these advantages growth will be more rapid, and with added growth land values will increase, so that the more the source of révenue is tapped, the larger will grow the flow of revenue.

ation on the Prosperity of Cities. He said in part:

In 1878 Ernest Ensiey, a wealthy planter of Tennessee, urged an amendment to the constitution so that nothing should be taxed which is of value to the state, that could and would run away or that could and would come to it. This rule has become an axiom, but before it can be applied the constitutions of about tarry-five states must be amended and I shail discuss only what can be accomplished in most cities by executive officials under existing law.

The interests of the city and of its citizens are identical Revenue must be ample and economically administered. Needless expenditures must be avoided, such as the unnecessary streets, so common in all our cities, which must be sewered, paved, lighted, cleaned and policed. To avoid opening unnecessary streets the development of the city must be uniform and compact, yet without overcrowding. Every lot must be put to its best use. In our cities not half the lots are put to the best use. We see wornout wooden buildings on lots which ought to be improved with modern offices or lotts iumble-down tenements on sites needed for factories, lots entirely vacant and unused needed for stores, factories or dwellings. In the suburbs are hundreds of acres of unused land, intersected by streets, which ought to be used for gardens.

Who Pays Taxt At the resumption of the meeting and after hearing and hastily discussing the views of Secretary Taft, the assembly precipitately receded from its various contenarms before negotiations could be reopened and resolved to notify Secretary Taft that they would appoint a committee of six to meet a similar committee from the liberals to negotiate peace terms, leaving all points upon which no agreement was reached to the arbitration of the American commissioners. The assembly directed that Secretary Taft be requested to notify the liberals of this action of the moderates, to arrange for the appointment of a similar committee of meeting. It was agreed that at the extraordinary session of congress called for next Friday the resignation of President Palma would be tabled, pending these negotiations, with the hope of obviating the necessity of his brigade at the camp of instruction at Fort

It was the ultimatum issued by Messrs. Taft and Bacon that brought the moderates to agree to these conciliatory methods.

Who Pays Taxf

The principal source of revenue in all American cities is the tax on real estate, yet few men take the frouble to find out who pays the real estate tax. The only difficulty in answering this question arises because real estate is two things of different nature joined under one name, and it is necessary to distinguish the effect of the tax insofar as it falls on the from its effect so far as it falls on improvements. The effect of the tax on any other labor product. The tax tends to check the erection of buildings and when the supply is decreased the rent rises by the amount of the tax. The tax on land not only cannot decrease the supply of land, as does the tax on buildings, but really increases the supply of land, as does the fax on buildings, but really increases the supply because it induces some owners to sell or improve sooner than it there were no tax. The real estate tax so far as it falls on the value of land, exclusive of improvements, makes land cheaper and easier to get, reduces rentals and tends to force land to be put to the best use. The tax is no burden on owners so long as the rate is uniform, because the purchase price paid was reduced by the amount of the tax capitalized at the current rate of interest.

Assessments are generally imperfectly made with disregard of the law, which Taft said:

The moderates yesterday determined to force American intervention by the resignation of government officers, thus leaving affairs in our hands. President Palma chose to regard our suggestions as demands, and has rejected them emphatically. Today we acquainted Aifredo Zayas, the liberal leader, with the situation, and he undertook to induce his associates to consent to the original proposition of the moderates, namely, that the insurgents lay down their arms and submit the entire controversy to the American commission, but the rebel commanders and men in the field suspected insincerity on the part of the government and decilined.

The negro insurgents especially insisted on retaining their arms until peace was Taft said: Assessments are generally imperfectly made with disregard of the law, which requires an assessment at market value. Moreover, buildings are almost always overassessed, as compared with land. Buildings can never be worth more than the cost of reproduction, and very soon after they are erected, deteriorate from wear or by comparison with more modern buildings. Land, on the other hand, in all progressive cities, is worth on the average more each year than the year before. In order, to secure an equitable assessment it is essential that the value of land should be separately stated, as it is in the city of New York and in Massachusetts and Maryland, and it is desirable that, either by publication of the assessment roll, or in other ways, the greatest publicity should be given to the work of assessors.

They believe that events in Havana are shaping up directly in accordance with the plans of the secreappears to be desperate the present aspect is really only one phase of the program mapped out by Secretary Taft. It is believed his purpose was to clear the field for a complete reconstruction in Cuba, but that this did not necessarily involve intervention in the sense of armed occupation of the island by American troops. President Palma's withdrawal or at least that of the conservative advisors who surrounded him, was, however, believed to be essential to the working out of this plan. It is conjectured by the officials here that the secretary's purpose is to carry out direct instructions from President Roosevelt and give the Cubans another chance to govern their own island. only way this could be worked out, they say, would be for him to call together some of the most patriotic and judicious of the Cubans, without regard to party affiliations and ask them to create a provisional government. They point out that the insurgent generals would be asked to give their allegiance to this government temporarily at least, and the military forces of the Palma government would be expected to support it, that the provisional government would be pledged to call new elections under conditions that would insure the control of the permanent government by a majority of the Cuban people, and that if they fail again to maintain order and security in the island then intervention must ensue, resulting in probable annexation.

No Developments This Week.

President Roosevelt is expected to arrive in Washington next Monday night and army officers are of the opinion that there be no sensational developments in will Cuban affairs before that time. The president has been constantly in communica tion with Major General F. C. Ainsworth. the military secretary, and Brigadier General J. Franklin Bell, the chief of staff of the army, for several days. All their plans for preparing to meet any emergency which may demand the sending of troops to Cuba have been approved at Oyster Bay and the president has repeatedly concurred in recommendations by general staff officers Dressmaking School that everything possible be in readiness for Cuba, upon which call the men and officers of the army can be ready to sail long bea trial.
