AMERICANS IN CUBA SAFE
So Writes W. A. Page of Bahia Honda, Formerly of Omaha.
BEST PART OF NATIVES WANT ANNEXATION
Insurgents So Sanguine of Success They Are Buying on Promise to Pay When They Gain Control.
Americans in the heart of Cuba's insurgent zone are not being molested; planters, native and foreign, are proceeding with their work as if no trouble was in progress. The better class of Cubans are hoping for annexation of the island by the United States; the insurgents are so sanguine of ultimate control of the government as to be buying goods of merchants on credit, with the promise to pay when the reins fall into their hands.
These points of information come from W. A. Page of Bahia Honda, Cuba, the center of the troublous territory, in a letter to a member of The Bee staff in Omaha. Mr. Page formerly resided in Omaha. He went to Cuba some years ago and is residing on his orange plantation, which is located in the province of Pinar del Rio, the center of the present rebellion against the government of Cuba. He writes under date of September 18:
I received copies of The Omaha Bee giving an account of the death of Mr. Rosewater and was both surprised and pained to learn the news. Mr. Rosewater was a good man for Nebraska and will be greatly missed.

"People in the states who have interests here are probably worried to a greater or less extent over the reported troubles in this locality, but from what I can learn the reports sent to the United States are to some extent exaggerated, as a matter of course. The insurgents visited Bahia Honda soon after the beginning of the trouble and after stealing all the horses belonging to Cubans that they could get their hands on, left without doing any injury to property owned by foreigners. Today the town is full of insurgents. They are buying goods of the merchants and giving them receipts for same, to be paid for when they get into power. The merchants of the town have either hidden or shipped most of their goods to Havana. One of the largest stores which carried a general stock valued at several thousand dollars I do not believe has over $500 worth of goods in stock. The insurgents have not molested the Americans in the least and very few of our Cuban employees have gone to war. On the contrary, the most of them are disgusted with the war. I believe I am safe in saying that the better class of Cubans, at least a large number of them, hope that the trouble will go far enough so that the United States will take possession of the island.
All the American planters are going ahead with their business just as if nothing out of the usual was taking place. We ourselves are getting ready to begin the shipment of citrus fruits in October, provided they ripen up as soon as we expect. The plan, of course, is to reach the markets of the United States before California and Florida are ready to begin shipping.

LAWSON OF RAILROAD WORLD
Admitted Outlaw Among Competitors See Epithets Hurlled at Great Western in Court.
Judge Troup is listening to the arguments of the attorneys in the injunction case brought by the Omaha Belt Line against the Chicago Great Western to keep it from proceeding to condemn for truckage purposes a strip of ground belonging to the Belt Line. Judge McHugh appeared for the Great Western and J. F. Stout for the Belt Line.
Judge McHugh declared in his argument the other railroads were continually seeking to harass the Great Western because it is an independent road. He declared its purpose is to build up important grain terminals in Omaha and the land sought is necessary to carry out this project.
"The Great Western is the Lawson of the railroad world," declared Mr. Stout in reply. "It is an admitted outlaw among other roads and it now comes and claims greater privileges than the other railroads have."

CURRENT LITERATURE
One of the notable features of the October Everybody's is the opening installment of Jack London's new serial, "Before Adam". This promises to be the literary sensation of the year. All of the author's daring and virility of style are there, and yet neither Mr. London nor any one else has ever before attempted such a venture into the realms of fiction.
Gunter's Magazine for October is unusually brilliant, not only on account of its large collection of entertaining stories and articles, but also because it contains an important sequel to "Mr. Barnes of New York," "The Shadow of the Vendetta," by Arthibald Clavering Gunter. This novel is in the same forceful style as that of the author's great original work, and interwoven in a plot of great strength and intensity are the delightful pathos and vivacious comedy which make Mr. Gunter's books so popular.
The World Today for October is notable for the large number of beautiful illustrations it contains. Few, if any of the higher-priced periodicals excel this 15-cent magazine in this regard. The variety of the articles is also notable. Particularly timely are those on "The Anti-Foreign Lying in Mexico," by Edward M. Conley, who speaks with authority, having been vice consul general of the United States at the City of Mexico, and "Trades Unions in Politics," by Thomas Sewall Adams of the University of Wisconsin, who comments on the entrance of the American Federation of Labor into politics and its probable effect. In view of the present interest in the pending elections of governors, senators and congressmen, the sketches of some of the candidates are also timely.
Beginning in the Housekeeper for October is the first of a series of articles on Japan by Marian Bousall, the associate editor, who has been in that country for practically a year gathering the material which comes under the general head, "Oriental Ideas for Western Women." The first article is "The Simplicity of Home Life." As Miss Bousall had the almost impossible opportunity of being a member for several months of the household of a family of the class from which many of the most famous of the Japanese heroes have sprung, the Samurai, this article is exceptionally instructive and at the same time equally entertaining. The series will continue for several months.
"Out While Dogs and Guns" is the title of the Pilgrim's October cover. The original is a clever piece of painting by Archie G. Allan, the artist. The reproduction appears to have been done in four printings, but in reality this handsome piece of work was done with two impressions, showing the remarkable advancement made in color printing of late. The October Pilgrim has all the earnestness characteristic of the after-vacation season. By all odds this is the strongest and best planned number the Pilgrim has ever put forth. The announcements for November include the names of strong writers, showing the new place in the magazine world.
These little insects that well-nigh pester us to death through the day and through the night are the basis of a delightfully humorous story by Harvey Subhain, entitled "Our Intimate Enemies," which is running in the People's Magazine. The "enemies" are none other than these little creatures, but Mr. Sutherland's articles treat the subject from so new a viewpoint and in such a witty and humorous fashion as to make the series as interesting and absorbing as a piece of good fiction. This series is only one of the many pleasant and readable articles that make up the 152 pages in the October People's, which sells for 10 cents.
The steady improvement which the Home Magazine has shown from month to month since its ownership by the Bobbs-Merrill company is marked by another forward step with the issuance of the October number. The contents are particularly seasonable and timely and in illustrative and pictorial features all efforts have been eclipsed.
"The Army of the Potomac, from 1861 to 1862," by Samuel Livingstone French, is an inside view of the Army of the Potomac and its leaders as told in the official dispatches, reports and secret correspondence; from date of its organization under General George B. McClellan in 1861 until the superseding of General Hooker, and the assignment of General Meade to its command in 1862. The Publishing society of New York is the publisher.
"The Circular Study," by Anna Katherine Green, author of "The Leavenworth Case," etc., is a powerful mystery story of New York City. This author has helped to elevate the detective story to a higher plane than any other contemporary writer, and this book will be welcomed by the readers of her books. R. F. Feno & Co. is the publisher.
"The Christian Faith," by Olin Alfred Curtis, professor of systematic theology in Drew Theological seminary, is a valuable work on systematic theology, and is the condensed product of many years study; yet it is fresh and thoroughly conversant with the latest criticism. The book is published by Eaton & Main.

"The Valley of Dreams" is a miscellaneous collection of poems by H. Hayden Sands. There are full-page illustrations in black and white with frontispiece and inside cover decorations by Adolfo de Nesti. Published by Alfred Bartlett of Boston.
"Greece, from the Coming of the Hellenes to A. D. 14," by E. S. Shuckburgh, Litt. D., Late Fellow of Emmanuel college, Cambridge, and lecturer in ancient history in University college, London, belongs to the "Story of the Nation" series. This series of historical studies is intended to present in graphic narratives the stories of the different nations that have attained prominence in history. Published by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

MAYOR'S PARDON CONDEMNED
Dahlman Releases Prisoner Who Had Offered to Compromise on His Crime.
The pardoning from the county jail of A. S. Goldstein by Mayor Dahlman has caused considerable criticism among those who are familiar with the details of the case. Goldstein is from Watkins, Ia., and he was convicted of short-changing Stephens & Smith. He was sent to the county jail from police court under a sentence of thirty days in the county jail on September 14. The following day he was pardoned by the mayor. Before his conviction he offered to compromise with his victims by returning the money if they would drop the prosecution. They refused, believing he should be punished. They secured his conviction, only to have him turned loose at once. Mr. Stephens expressed considerable indignation over the action of the mayor.
ROBBERS LEAVE BLOOD SPOTS
Three Men Crack Safes, Get Money and Appear to Have Been Shot.
A successful safe-cracking job was pulled off in Benson Thursday night, when the safe in the saloon of Peter Graveri was broken open and robbed of $70. The robbers, three in number, entered the saloon by cutting through the panel of the back door. They used nitro-glycerine on the safe, but evidently did not gauge the amount used very accurately, as the force of the discharge blew the safe to pieces. The noise of the explosion awakened a man who was sleeping upstairs over the saloon, who procured a shotgun and rushed to the scene. The robbers fled at his approach and he had time to take but one shot at them, which he thought did not take effect, although he chased them for some distance.
Some of the papers from the safe were found near the County club later in the day. They bore bloodmarks and it is believed one of the robbers was struck by a bullet. It is thought he may apply to a physician to have his injuries dressed.

S.S.S. CURES BLOOD POISON

The first outward sign of Contagious Blood Poison is a small sore or blister. As the poisonous virus becomes more firmly entrenched in the blood a red eruption appears on the body, the mouth and throat ulcerate, the hair begins to come out, glands in the neck and groin swell, copper-colored spots appear on the breast, back, etc., and the unfortunate victim finds himself diseased from head to foot. Mercury and potash do not cure Contagious Blood Poison; they shut the disease up in the system and remove the outward symptoms for awhile, but when the treatment is left off the trouble returns. Then the system being weakened from the action of these strong minerals the disease makes more rapid headway than before. S. S. S. is the antidote for Contagious Blood Poison. It cures permanently and certainly by going down into the blood and removing every vestige of the virus. It is free from all minerals, and while purifying the blood it builds up the entire system by its fine tonic effects. S. S. S. destroys every particle of the poison and removes all danger of transmitting it to others. S. S. S. cures Contagious Blood Poison because it is a perfect blood purifier. Book with instructions for self treatment and any medical advice free.
