MARINES SENT TO PINAR DEL RIO.

Americans Will Be Handy in Case Disbanded Rebels Make Trouble.

HAVANA, Oct. 2.—The attitude of the authorities of the United States in Cuba regarding the possibility of the present situation seemed fairly expressed this afternoon, when Colonel Waller, commanding the marines, remarked to the Associated Press that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

The remark was called forth by preparation for the possible outbreak of a rebellion to transport 300 marines from the camp westward tonight for the purpose of having them in adjacent provinces when the first installments of General Guerra's disbanded men reached these places tomorrow. While no disorder is anticipated where the revolutionaries reach their homes, the provisional government and the military authorities consider the actual occupation of the Pinar del Rio region quite as essential as the occupation of other portions of the island, and regard it best to have an American force there to insure the preservation of order. The battalion of marines, which will be the first to occupy Pinar del Rio, therefore was sent forward tonight by special train.

The orders came from Governor Taft at 6 o'clock and half an hour later the battalion had boarded a train at Havana Vista, a station near the city of Columbia. The cars were switched from the Mariano to the Western railroad and thence departed for the west.

Guerra's Following Disbanding.

One thousand of Guerra's followers will go to Pinar del Rio in special trains, while others will start on their homeward journey, taking with them their horses and extra mounts. It is the purpose eventually to restore all horses to their rightful owners.

It is believed tonight that all the revolutionists in the vicinity of Havana will have been peacefully dispersed in three days. General Guerra and Del Castillo are actively co-operating to this end. Together with General Kuzman, the commander-in-chief of the rebels in Santa Clara province, they called at the American legation today and renewed their promises of assistance. They also thanked Governor Taft for his courtesies and discussed the projected amnesty proclamation. Governor Taft told his visitors that he would take up this subject later, not having time now to give it the necessary consideration, and said that the matter did not come up he would investigate personally all cases which might require his attention in order that justice be done.

The fact that General Guzman is acting in sincere co-operation is believed to preclude trouble of any consequence in the work of disarming the rebels in Santa Clara province, and no fears of disorders in other sections are entertained.

Palma Leaves the Palace.

While the departure today from Havana of ex-President Palma was the most important event of the last twenty-four hours, the former president left the capital only after the public had been given in the afternoon papers. Only his cabinet ministers and a few intimate friends accompanied the former president and his family to the railroad station. Some of these friends went with the family to Matanzas and did not return to Havana until they had seen the Palma family safe in the home of other friends in that city.

On the way from Havana to Matanzas Senator Palma's special train stopped at two stations where the government volunteers were preparing for disarming and disband. When Colonel Regio, in command of the battalion at Campo Florida informed Senator Palma what he was doing, the ex-president expressed his gratification and said that disarming was in accordance with patriotic duty.

At Jaruco Colonel Lima told Senator Palma he had ordered his force to be mustered out, and that this would be his last act as an officer. Continuing, the colonel declared that the people of Matanzas were particularly pleased that the ex-president should be permitted to enjoy that rest and tranquility he so well deserved. He said also that the Cuban people were sure to re-elect Palma to the presidency at the first opportunity.

Senator Palma said to Colonel Lima that he had full confidence in the good faith of the United States and that he believed the American government intended to restore Cuban independence. He advised all to be patient and wait the outcome, which he felt sure would be entirely acceptable.

A great crowd awaited the train at Matanzas, which is the strategic stronghold of the island. The numbers at the station had been augmented by an excursion from Cardenas and people from the surrounding country. The provincial and municipal officers welcomed the ex-president, who was escorted to the home of Manuel Fleischer. Here the friends who had come over from Havana took their final farewell, leaving the Palma family to that quiet retirement which they desire. The Palmas will remain in Matanzas for some time, going later to the Yalmor plantation at Bayamo, Santiago province.

Work on Sanitary Problems.

Governor Taft tonight is busy in his sanitary work. Minister Morand will call on him tomorrow, going over the plans prepared by the Cuban health officials for coping governors were kept constantly busy and saluting the loyal subjects of His Majesty. The parade marched down Farnam street to Fifteenth, north to Douglas, east to Eleventh, south to Howard, west to Sixteenth, south to Leavenworth, and then counter marched to Cuming, where it disbanded.

A stand was erected in front of the city hall and from this the judges and city officials viewed the parade, which was a fine display of the city's resources.

Line of Floats.

These were the floats in the parade: 1. Byrnes-Hammer Dry Goods company, fifty-two pretty young women very appropriately took the lead in the floats. Each of the girls was dressed in white and wore a badge advertising the Oak brand of shirts.

J. J. Deight, advertising his bank safe, had a stone and brick bank on wheels, in which a bound and gagged night watchman was on duty. Working at the safe were two bank burglars, and they were reparting like this: "No use, Bill. Deight has sold him a Manganese." "I guess you're right. Let's give her one more shot. Never saw one before I couldn't bust." And with these words the busy burglar took his other shot, but the safe failed to "bust."

J. L. Brandeis & Sons had workers busy turning out the latest kinds of millinery in a float green with maple and oak leaves, over the top of which was the latest or creations in the hat line by that eminent window dresser, Mr. Collins.

J. D. Palmer & Son were in the line with a full stock of spices and things the firm handles, in a pretty float.

D. J. O'Brien has his candy factory represented by a bevy of pretty girls attending to this important branch of the commercial world, and the float was decorated with a covering showing various brands of the sweet goods.

Brook Brewery company has an elaborate float, setting forth the virtues of Sturz malt extract. The unique feature of this display was the manner in which the team was hitched. It was a spike arrangement, three horses being on the wheel, men two and then one for a leader.

Harness Makers at Work.

Two hofers, harness, robes and saddles, representing the use of his wares not only a good, was an impressive description of a progressive harness manufacturer. Workers were busy turning out the goods the firm sells.

The Willow Springs brewery was there with a full outfit and sample goods to show the finished product.

The Western Distilling company, which is the retail name of the Jobbing firm of Furst Bros, showed a hospital tent as a means of advertising their Red Cross whisky. On the float was a tent containing a camp bed, and at the rear of the float was a bottling device in operation.

Allen P. Ely & Co. displayed a gas engine in full working order, spouting and spitting at every step in the road.

The Omaha Tent and Awning company demonstrated the use of its wares not only a good, was an impressive description of a progressive tent manufacturer. Workers were busy turning out the goods the firm sells.

If no thrift was created by Metz Brothers' float it is not the fault of the artist who designed this representation of wet goods. On the float artistically arranged was the cask, cool and apparently dripping, while in the center was the great big bottle, the "King of Beers." The driver sat under a canopy pretty enough to drive a man to drink.

The Omaha Mitten factory had a woman busy turning out mittens from a regulation sewing machine and the announcement that this factory was the first of the kind in the west.

Perego & Moore made a big showing with one cigar. The cigar was a large one, however, and the float was a good variety. Beside the cigar were cigar makers at work and as a beacon light to see that everything ran smoothly was a beautiful woman. George Moore had the float manned with men and drivers from his store on this side of the river.

Faxon & Gallagher's float was the prize winner for the best mechanical exhibition, and the judges were not long in making the selection. Mr. Pickens had spent considerable time in turning out a float which would attract attention, and he was rewarded by having the first prize pinned on his outfit. The float was a mammoth affair and showed the latest process of roasting coffee. Faxon & Gallagher make a specialty of this brand of coffee and had chosen coffee from the long list of articles handed to make the display.

Piano Plant is Busy.

Schmoller & Mueller gave an exhibition of manufacturing machinery in their float. The workmen made a brand new instrument while countless thousands watched them. This was an excellent float and elicited great applause.

The Nebraska Clothing company had a unique and original float to advertise its line of clothing. The float was a brand new instrument while countless thousands watched them. This was an excellent float and elicited great applause.

with yellow fever. These plans include an increase in the sanitary force and equipment and very much greater expenditure.

Major J. R. Kean, who was one of the sanitary experts during the former American occupation of the island, is at present on the way here to co-operate in this work.

It is not probable that the governor will appoint new cabinet ministers until the affairs of the island are turned over to the provisional government. It is Governor Taft's desire to place the various departments in control of the men who were not so active during the revolution as to arouse much opposition from either liberals or moderates.

crowd which looked at the parade and looked in the sun and in the shade uncomplainingly. It was slow, slowly over its route was doubtless the largest that ever witnessed a delectable parade in Omaha. Moments ago the line of march were covered with people, windows were filled, yards were packed; long before the parade started the court house square was a solid mass of humanity, the streets were crowded for blocks. The people had come from everywhere.

The human lane began to form directly after the noon hour, and when the caravan left the big tent at Twenty-fifth and Farnam streets at 2:30 the people were ready and waiting for the appearance of Chief Donahue at the head of a platoon of police was the signal for an outburst of cheers, which stopped only when the last float, namely, the patrol wagon, had left the streets.

standpatter and that he "may lead a movement for tariff revision in 1908."

This charge then is made: "The president favors certain railroads and accepts gifts from them, in violation of the interstate commerce law, demands and receives money in favored banks without interest, diverts funds appropriated for one purpose to another, allows public money to pay for a literary bureau to boom his party."

Mr. Roosevelt has shown greater regard for the interests of corporations and less regard for the law than any other executive the country has ever had.

Maintaining that the principles of the democratic party defy and always have opposed monopoly, it is stated that the democrats were the first to introduce anti-trust bills, whereas the first resolution to investigate the trusts was not enacted by a republican senate.
