tion is under the charge of Captain J. P. Merry of Manchester, Ia. Members of kindred societies are cordially invited to be present, and the wives and daughters of members, as well as invited guests, are entitled to be present at the banquet. The president of the society is General Grenville M. Dodge of Council Bluffs and New York, and Colonel Cornelius Cagle, Cincinnati, O., is the recording secretary. The membership of the society is now about 600 and over 3,000 original members are dead.

Royal Arcanum.
That the future of the Royal Arcanum in Omaha is very encouraging is demonstrated by the fact that the efforts of the local members, with the assistance of Supreme Deputy A. W. Sinsel, to secure a class of 100 applicants to be initiated on November 12 in this city bids fair to be accomplished, but to run largely over that number. Three-fourths of the necessary number have been secured, and as there is a full month yet in which to secure the balance necessary it is not unlikely that double the present number will be in attendance on the evening selected.
A special feature on the program will be the service of Mr. E. A. Barbour of Springfield, Mo., who is a very able talker and one of the bright stars in the supreme council of the order. It will be a gala event in Omaha, as several hundred members from the surrounding cities will be in attendance to witness the initiation as exemplified by the degree team from South Omaha, and an elaborate banquet and a program of toasts will close the services.

OMAHA HIGH SCHOOL NOTES
The meetings of the literary societies at the High School Friday were the first ones under the direction of the new society teachers. According to the present plan every society had three teachers who see that the programs are carried out without a hitch and that credit for the work goes to the proper members. Many of the former teachers over one society have been moved to other rival societies.
The Priscilla Alden, a prominent girls' society, joined with the Creverion Debate club, one of the boys' societies, in a program. The idea is fairly new and was well taken by the members of both societies. The following program was rendered:
Debate—Resolved, That a classical education is of more benefit in after the than a scientific one. Affirmative: Harris Vance, Helen Wright. Negative: Sid. Smith, Ruth Best.
Question Box
