Memorial at Cathedral

The Nash Memorial chapel at the Catholic cathedral at Fortleth and Burt streets will not be built until spring, and in all probability work will not be resumed on the cathedral until that time. Bids were taken on the chapel and a certain portion of the cathedral, but now it is given out that the contract is not to be let on there bids. The church people say they cannot build any more until the chapel is crected chanel until the church is ready to complete the other structure, as she says there will be no use for the chapel until the cathedral is completed. It was intended to bring the cathedral to a certain height this fall, but by the arrangement with Mrs. Nash it will be necessary to wait until working plans are entirely Star ished by the architect.
