AT THE PLAYHOUSES

'The Magic Melody' at the Boyd. Mr. Walker Whitehead and company in 'The Magic Melody' a drama in three acts. The cast: Heinar, a young violinist... Mr. Whitehead... Mrs. Whitehead... Miss Letitia Wolstan...

more than ordinary interest, for the story of the struggle of the young violinist for recognition is in some degree akin to that of Whitehead himself. And, to his credit, like Heinar, he has refused to advertise his eccentricities to secure attention to his art. He may not be able to command success, but he deserves it.

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Titled Englishman Pays Visit of Inspection to the Packing Houses.

COMMENTS FAVORABLY ON CONDITION

Contractors for City Hall Sign Up and Document Will Be Ready to Submit to Council at its Next Meeting.

Rt. Hon. Sir Walter Foster of the British House of Lords was a South Omaha visitor yesterday. He arrived in Omaha Wednesday evening and yesterday visited the four of the packing plants. He was accompanied by a government chemist by the name of Kidner. He visited the Swift company's plant first, and it is understood that he is being entertained by the Swifts while here. He asked to show over the plant. He visited all departments and his companion took copious notes. Manager Edwards accompanied him and went everywhere. He asked numerous questions of the employees and especially questioned the government inspectors as to their duties. He appeared much interested in all departments of the packing business. From Swift's plant he, in company with Mr. Edwards, visited Cudahy's plant. After passing through all the departments there, Mr. Edwards was given an exhaustive visit. The visit of the Englishman appears to be official in one sense. It appears that he is gathering information to be used in comparison with the English slaughtering and packing regulations. The knowledge he may have gained in the American plants may be the suggestion of some advanced efficiency in the English code. He expressed general satisfaction over conditions as he found them in all the plants. The managers of the packing houses do not seem to know that his business in South Omaha at this time had any special significance, other than the seeking of information. On this point, Sir Foster let fall no satisfactory hint.

The city clerk yesterday executed the contract for the city hall with McDonald & Beck. The bond furnished by the contractors has not yet been deposited with the clerk. It will be forthcoming before the meeting of the council Monday night. As soon as the action of the clerk and mayor is approved by the council the work on the hall may be commenced. The limit for completing the building is July 15, 1907.

The clerk sent out a notification to Hugh Murphy and his bondsmen, the American Surety and Bond company, represented here by Philip Potter, in accordance with instructions from the city council, that if he failed to resume the paving of Missouri avenue the city would lay the paving and charge the difference to Murphy. Mayor Hoover stated he expected to attempt the work of laying that paving, but he also anticipated that the whole business would be tied up, if Mr. Murphy so desired, by his bringing an injunction to prevent the work.

Registration is likely Yesterday being the first day of registration, perhaps, was the greatest reason why the number of voters registered was light over the entire city. The total number of names registered by all parties would not exceed 100 on the average at each polling place. The mayor visited all the places of about eight registrars yesterday morning. The rest of the thirty-six were on hand and had qualified. The booths remained open until 3 p. m.

WOMAN IN CLUB AND CHARITY

The Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs is in session this week in Chicago, the meeting being held in Mandel hall, University of Chicago. Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, president of the General Federation, is the guest of honor of the convention. Mrs. Ella W. Peattie, formerly president of the Omaha Woman's club, made the principal address of the literature session Wednesday, her subject being 'The Sunday School Library.' She said:

No child who is to become a person of taste and a lover of truth should be allowed to roam unguided through the mazy mazes of the poorer sort of Sunday school libraries. The poverty-stricken style of the greater part of the books to be found in these libraries, the barbarous, the fictitious awards bestowed upon those who have above all, the misrepresentations of life are distinctly injurious.

Every one of us must be aware of the quality of the books that are put into the hands of our children. We must be sure that the books we put into their hands are not only good in themselves, but that they are good for them. We must be sure that the books we put into their hands are not only good in themselves, but that they are good for them.

It is absurd, too, to try to keep the children from the books that are good for them. They must know the true story of the battles that they would learn the significance of the struggle of literature and the struggle of life. They feel it in a mystical way, but what is the poetry of their early youth must become the noble realism of their fuller understanding.

Mrs. J. L. Baker was hostess of Wednesday morning's meeting of the New Book Review club, thirteen members and two guests being present. 'Conitton,' by Winston Churchill, was the book of the morning and instead of the usual evening Mrs. H. R. Penny gave a report of the recent meeting of the Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs at Kearney, at which she represented the club as delegate. During the business hour Mrs. W. E. Hitchcock resigned the secretaryship and Mrs. John H. McDonald was elected in her place. The usual luncheon followed.

Mrs. W. T. Brown, chairman of the literature committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, has the following to say of some of the club programs and outlines of study:

In looking over the outlines of study of a great many clubs, the committee has been obliged to make a selection. The key-note of the programs, many show lack of sequence, and many more to its miscellaneous character. Being received many inquiries for study outlines, also for information on topics which often seem without much value, except the title of the subject. The committee has thought it advisable to present some subjects which we hope may be helpful to those clubs which are not already provided.

We have prepared four programs which will be distributed to the subjects being 'The Development of the Modern Novel,' 'Study of United States History,' 'The Modern Drama,' and 'The Women of the Nineteenth Century.' The last subject has been chosen with special reference to younger women's clubs, a need suggested by our president, Mrs. Decker.

Dundee Woman's club held its regular fortnightly meeting Wednesday at the home of Mrs. E. R. Hume. The study hour was devoted to the Norman period in English history, the club having taken up the 'New View' reading course for this year. Mrs. F. R. Ellison will entertain the next meeting of the club.

Prof. Patty Lectures on Radium, Wireless Telegraphy and Liquid Air. An interesting lecture, accompanied with equally interesting demonstrations, was given Thursday evening at Creighton university by Mrs. W. B. Patty, on the subjects of 'Wireless Telegraphy, Radium and Liquid Air.' The lecture was given before a large audience under the auspices of the Creighton University Athletic association.

Prof. Patty adds to his qualities as a scientist that of an orator and the faculty of divesting his talk of verbose scientific technicality and at once puts himself on the best terms with his audience. His first experiments were with wireless telegraphy, which he illustrated with a complete set of sending and receiving apparatus. He showed that the principle lay wholly in the transmission of ether waves to and from instruments similarly attuned. He believed that the time would come when wires would be relegated to the scrap heap and that the wireless system would be the only means of the transmission of electrical energy for communication, light and power.

Prof. Patty had with him six tubes of radium. The lecture room being darkened for the purpose, he gave several highly interesting experiments with it, particularly as regards its peculiar qualities in disseminating light rays as well as recuperating itself without any apparent loss of energy. He believed that the capabilities of radium were limitless as an energy, both as a curative of cancer, tuberculosis and other diseases, but its present applicability as a curative agent was in its infancy, as it would be likely to destroy the life of the victim before it would get its work on the bacteria it was intended to destroy.

His liquid air experiments were numerous and replete with interest, and were similar to those demonstrated in all liquid air experiments.

I applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it gave me relief in a short time. In two days I was all right,' says Mrs. L. Cousins, Ottumwa, Mich. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is a liniment and is especially valuable for sprains and swellings.

No Transactions Considered Closed Until You're Thoroughly Satisfied

You'd find a wonderful discrepancy of figures if you were to compare the number of concerns in Omaha who advertise that they follow the above policy and compare it with the number of concerns that actually do it. But Hartman's is one of the few that guarantee it. Our policy of "money back if not satisfied" is an established policy of this great institution—we put it in the shape of a guarantee. Whether your purchase figures several cents or several hundred dollars, it's satisfaction or your money back at Hartman's. It's a "safe place to trade."

KENNEDY GETS THE FAVOR

Congressman Instrumental in Securing International Money Order Service for Substitution.

Congressman John L. Kennedy has received word from Third Assistant Postmaster General E. C. Madden that the international branch of the money order service will be placed in operation November 1, at station 1, South Omaha. This is in response to a request from Mr. Kennedy, calling attention to the fact that many of the people of the neighborhood are Bohemians, who buy a great many foreign orders and who frequently are unable to transmit their business in the English language. Mr. Kennedy estimates that foreign money order business among the Bohemians at this station will amount to $1,000 monthly. This is a matter greatly appreciated by these people. Station 1 was established through the influence of Congressman Kennedy and the concession of the international service is a great benefit. This is a matter to which Mr. Kennedy gave much attention, realizing his best endeavor, because he was convinced it would be a good thing for his constituents, who were so anxious for it. His success has come much sooner than was hoped possible and is greatly appreciated.
