Interest now centers in the work of the coroner's jury, which today made a careful inspection of the scene of the wreck and the drawbridge at which the train left the rails. The jury sworn in by Coroner Gaskill is headed by State Senator Edward S. Lee as foreman. The Jurors met at 1 o'clock and accompanied by the coroner, Prosecuting Attorney Abbott, City Solicitor Wootten and several other city the best all wool imported quality at 39c officials, proceeded to the scene of the tragdy. One Car Taken From Water. After the forward car of the two submerged coaches had been hoisted to the surface and the divers who had been working on the wreckage all day long had made a final examination of the second car without finding any more bodies, Mr Atterbury of the Pennsylvania rallroad, who, with several of his assistants had sen on the scene since Sunday night, expressed his belief that the total number of dead would not exceed fifty-three.

On returning from the drawbridge Mr. Atterbury said the cause of the accident still was a mystery to him.

Mr. Atterbury himself showed the juror how the bridge is operated and explained in detail the manner of opening and closing the draw. On their return to this city the jury decided to hold the first session of the inquiry on Thursday,

Although reasonably certain that the waterway into which the electric train fell had been relieved of all its dead, the divers continued their work late into the night and maintained a diligent search The wrecking crew was also kept busy preparing for the hoisting of the second car and it is expected that this will be raised before morning. The debris of the last car which struck and was held fast by an abutment has not yet been removed an effort in that direction resulting in half the coach sliding into the stream.

Despite the heavy obstructions presented by the wrecked train, the roadway has been sufficiently cleared to permit the reumption of traffic and the scheduled time table is again followed. Revised Lint of Dead.

It was not until several ours later that the divers were able to make any progress. Then the awful evidences of the diaster became more apparent. When the two cars struck the bottom of the waterway they stood almost on end and the first man to descend reported that the victims were packed in the lower ends of the submerged cars so tightly that it was difficult to move them.

Boats Unable to Assist. One by one the bodies were carried to a waiting train and laid side by side, later to be borne to this city and placed in the Empire theater, which was pressed into the service as a temporary morgue. Thousands of persons quickly gathered at the scene of the disaster, and a score of boats soon surrounded the spot where the cars disappeared, but they were unable to render any aid; and could only await arrival of the divers. At the morgue the scenes were pathetic. Persons who had friends on the ill-fated cars crowded about the door and with difficulty were restrained from forcing their way into the building. One of the

Walter Scott, the motorman, was killed because of his anxiety to spend a part of the day with his wife here. Dr. Hudders and his wife were on their and intended visiting Mrs. Gorman, the doctor's sister-in-law, who resides in this city. The latter was at the station waiting for the arrival of the doctor and his wife, and when she learned of the accident the woman collapsed. The bodies of the doc-for and his wife were among the last brought in from the wreck. Divers Exhausted. Prosecutor Albertson, Coroner Guskill, Captain Woodruff and Chief of Police Maxwell superintended the removal of the bodies from the scene of the disaster. As each body was brought to the surface it was searched and the effects were taken in charge by Captain Woodruff. The valuables were placed in packages, which were numbered and a number corresponding was placed on the body.

The divers were so completely exhausted by their continued efforts that they were compelled to suspend operations a short time before daybreak. Their work was particularly arduous because the wrecking crews, which had been summoned to the scene of the accident, were unable to raise the submerged cars. The huge derrick which was run out upon the long t.estie. with the added weight of the wrecker cars suspended from the crane, was more than the bridge would sustain, and it was feared the stress would cause it to collapse. An attempt was made to cut the first and second cars asunder and lift a single car ut of the water, but the cables broke at the first attempt, and on the second the already twisted car buckled.

The attempts to lift the coaches were then emporarily abandoned, and all efforts were directed toward getting the bodies of the victims out of the wreckage. When it was certain that no bodies are in the tangled and twisted coaches they will be broken up and pulled ashore.
