Seeds of Berger Threw Up Sponges After He Got Terrible Beatings.

CONTEST IS FAST FOR HEAVYWEIGHTS

Neither Man, However, is Serious Candidate for Championship Honors—Berger Favorite in Betting.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—Al Kaufmann and Sam Berger an awful beating tonight, when Berger was practically out on his hands three up the sponge in the tenth round. Only one old Berger seem to have a chance. This was in the third round of the opening of the round he dropped Berger with a right to the jaw. Kaufmann followed him with a left to the same place. Kaufmann took the count for nine seconds. In a clinch Berger threw him on the floor again, but Kaufmann came up strong and fought back. Kaufmann landed in the second round on Berger's jaw and floored him. Berger stayed down nine seconds and came up groggy, but managed to last throughout the round.

After the third round Kaufmann fought close and did damaging work with right and left jabs, but Berger apparently did not avoid. In the last few rounds Berger grew steadily weaker. His legs wobbled, his blows lacked steam. Occasionally he would stand up and swing, but he was landed. All the time Kaufmann was going and appearing in the clinches. In the fifth round Berger went down for the first time from a right to the jaw. He got up and Kaufmann slugged him all through the remainder of the round. When the tenth round opened Kaufmann went at him viciously and beat him into a state of helplessness. Berger could not get up his hands and head and was from the first to fall to the floor when his hands threw up the sponges.

The early part of the fight Berger showed signs of cleverness, but he lacked stamina. Kaufmann on the contrary was never, but strong, and kept after him through the fight. Judging from tonight's exhibition neither is a serious candidate for championship honors. However, for a heavyweight fight it was a fast contest. Both men weighed in late this afternoon and Berger tipped the beam at about 190 pounds. Kaufmann weighed about five pounds less. Tonight the betting varied from odds of 10 to 8 to 10 to 7, with Berger the favorite.

The game with Ames was a hard fought game, but Ames was able to muster a team of sufficient caliber to win. The game will be played at Ames street park.

The Omaha High school foot ball team will leave for their high school team for its season Saturday at Dietz park. The local team has the undivided backing of the entire membership of the high school and is trying to make good to its backers by hard work in practice and by playing winning games on the field. The game will be called at 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon at Dietz park.

Attorney for Countess Tells Story of Her Treatment by Count.

Maitre Cruppi Says that Trouble in Family Started on Honeymoon Through Count's Demand for Money.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—The Castellane divorce case was heard this afternoon before M. Henry Dite, president of the tribunal of first instance of the Seine. Neither the count nor the countess was present. Maitre Cruppi, for the countess, pleaded for a divorce on the documentary evidence submitted.

In an extended review counsel declared that the countess acted under influence, but solely for the purpose of ending forever the peril of the moral degradation of her household. He explained the marriage contract, by which the regime of separation of property was established from the very beginning, and stated that the countess had been the victim of the count's intrigues. Maitre Cruppi asked that the countess be given the custody of her three children. When trouble started for an hour and a half and had not finished when the court took recess. Counsel presented the case of the countess, a complete and pitiful story, a wreck of her married life, due primarily to the count's inordinate extravagance. Even in spite of their domestic infelicity, the countess was too good and scrupulous to begin an action for divorce until she possessed full proof. She was only 30 when she was married in 1886, and Maitre Cruppi asserted, the happiness of the honeymoon was disturbed on their arrival in Paris by the count's demands for money. The count's income was 600,000 francs and he allowed her $50 per month. The court room was crowded, among those present being many members of the American colony.

By 1899 the countess's interests, M. Cruppi said, were so heavily compromised by the count's extravagance that it necessitated a family meeting in New York and the appointment of legal trustees. But the difficulties regarding money were unending and in order to obtain funds the count pawned or sold at ridiculous prices the most costly objects. When the countess protested the count abused her in the presence of servants, and when she declined to attach her signature to documents he frequently pinched her and sometimes struck her, the first time being four months after their marriage.

Maitre Cruppi read extracts from one of the letters, giving a rendezvous at Dijon. It reads: "I am kissing you on the neck. Do you feel it?" and so on.

Counsel also detailed lies with "Mme. B." and "Mme. C." whom the count met in apartments which he rented in different parts of Paris.

M. Cruppi had not finished his presentation of the case when the hearing was adjourned until next week. After recess M. Cruppi read from a notebook kept by the cook of one of these apartments giving a list of the names of what counsel characterized as "an unparadiseable offense against the countess." He also recounted the liaison with "Madame C." who employed a mounted guard and signaled from a window when the count was clear.

But counsel continued, the count's love affairs were not confined to women of society. They included numerous other women, the reading of whose letters created merriment in court.

Probable Defense. M. Cruppi said that the count's defense would probably be that, being young and rich, he could not protect himself against the assaults of loveless women. In the face of the overwhelming evidence submitted, M. Cruppi declared, his opponent could not expect the tribunal to ask for the summoning of witnesses. Counsel added:

"Does he imagine by dragging out the case to obtain for himself the use of Count Bont's plan to conquer his wife's affections is too transparent?"

The final rupture came the day after the famous entertainment of King Carlos of Portugal, December 12, 1905. The count at that time insisted that the countess go with him to a shooting party given by a noble of whom the countess had cause to complain, and when the count became engaged at the countess' refusal, she abruptly announced her intention to separate from him and began legal proceedings.

Laurier Wins Bye Election. Result of Spritely Contest in Nova Scotia is Pronounced Victory for Administration.

LIVERPOOL, N. S. Oct. 31.—The administration of Sir Wilfred Laurier won a pronounced victory in a bye-election held in the Queen's Sheldrake district today to fill the vacancy in the federal parliament caused by the resignation of W. S. Fielding, finance minister and Liberal leader in Nova Scotia for irregularities committed by his agents in the general election. Mr. Fielding was re-elected by more than 1,000 majority over Dr. W. C. Weldon, the Conservative candidate. The defeat of Weldon by so decisive a vote is attributed to the defection of hundreds of conservatives, who were not in favor of any opposition to the return of the finance minister. The defeated candidate is director of the law school of Dalhousie university.

Speaker Says Democrats Would Abolish the Food, While Republicans Would Distribute it in More Equitable Manner.

DENTON, Md., Oct. 31.—Secretary Bonaparte spoke here today at a meeting in the interest of William H. Jackson, the republican nominee for congress in the First district of Maryland. Mr. Bonaparte's speech was a plea for the continuation of the next house of representatives in republican hands. He quoted figures showing the increase of the foreign commerce of the country since 1896, when the republicans came into power, in support of his contention that the national property was due to republican administration, "but this very prosperity," he continued, "is not the source of some serious embarrassment. When a nation grows rich the individuals who make up the nation grow rich also, and in such cases some of these individuals always grow richer than others. We have developed a crop of wealthy men without precedent in history, and, moreover, the long distance telephone, the automobile, and the development of corporations, these are the very men we want to unite their wealth in huge combinations which threaten the commercial liberties of their fellow citizens and even bid defiance to our laws."

Trusts and Swine. Mr. Bonaparte likened the trusts to a pen of pigs in which the big, strong, over-fed pig crowded the little ones away from their feed and got far more than his share. He continued: "Our big, strong, greedy, over-prosperous trusts are animals of the like order. They crowd their smaller and weaker fellows from the feeding trough so that these don't get their fair share of our national property. The problem is how to so control the great beasts so as to give the little ones a show. "The democrats propose to cut off the supply of swill, or, in other words, to destroy our property by unsettling all our business relations. No doubt this process would soon make the big pigs as thin as ragorbacks, but without making the small ones any better. "Remember we don't complain of the former because they are themselves big and fat, but because they make others small and thin. The fact that the big pigs become the better for their own and the more money trusts make the better for the American people, provided the little pigs get fat, too, or at all events as fat as they can, and in the other that all dealers outside of the trusts have a fair field and the trusts have no favor. "Our president wants and has always wanted a square deal for everyone, whether pig, lion or man, and under his leadership the republican party has tried to put and keep each of our trusts in its own proper place, where it can't crowd any of the little fellows around it. To these ends he has asked the aid of congress and of the courts to keep the corporate and individual wealth of the country in due subjection to the law, not to make rich men poor, for to do this would only make poor men poorer, but to make rich men low-bidder, so that poor men may become rich if they will. And the two houses of congress, as well as the courts, have responded to his appeal."
