AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

War is Threatened Along Tracks Recently Laid by Union Pacific.

COMPANY PLACES GUARDS ALONG LINE

Humor that Crowd was Collecting to Tear up the Tracks was the Occasion, but No Crowd Appears.

Things took rather a military aspect in South Omaha last night, when the Union Pacific stationed a large force of men over its newly laid tracks at Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth streets, between W and Y. The reason for the move lay in a rumor that a large gang was organizing for the purpose of tearing up the tracks laid Wednesday afternoon. In sympathy with the railroad was the brewery, which will be the chief patron in that vicinity. Against the road are a number of dissatisfied property owners whose demands have not been met to their satisfaction. There are others who are ready with an attack on the South Omaha administration, declaring that the council had no right to vacate those streets and that the administration violated its pre-election pledges in giving up the right to the streets without what they deem proper remuneration. Persistent threats from these quarters made it appear unsafe to leave the tracks unprotected. Accordingly in the early dusk John C. Vizard, the special agent of the Union Pacific, distributed his forces. About forty men were stationed at Twenty-seventh and W streets. Here they built a big bonfire in true camp style. Most of the men sat around the blaze, but in the tall weeds scouts were placed. There were four or five police officers on hand. At Thirtieth a like squad was placed and the whole force of the brewery, reinforced by about 100 railroad men, was stationed in concealment inside its walls. Martin Jetter remained on duty with the men, the principal weapons of warfare were a couple of lengths of fire hose attached to a fire plug at each of the streets named. The pressure was high. The workmen had their picks and shovels at hand, but the police were the only men who bore firearms. Captain Turquist directed the forces of the South Omaha department.

At 8 o'clock a gang was reported organizing to attempt to remove the tracks. It was supposed to make a rendezvous about Thirtieth and S streets. Several scouts were sent out in many directions to try and locate the gang, but returned with nothing alarming. About 10 in the evening several men were seen near the Twenty-seventh street camp, scouting about in the weeds on the hillside near the bridge yards. They did not get within hailing distance. The men in camp kept watch in their direction with some apprehension and looked for an attack later in the night.

Insurrection in Prospect.

W. C. Lambert, representing several property owners along the line of the spur track of the Union Pacific which is now being laid by that company to the Jetter brewery, yesterday overhauled the council proceedings and records to see if there was any legal ground on which any of his clients might base a claim for damages. The ordinance covers X and Y streets, but it is claimed that the street crossing was made at W street, and for that reason may be attacked. The history of W street will have to be looked up in the archives of the clerk and in the county office. It is likely that an injunction will again be brought forward. In the meantime the railroad is straining every nerve to complete the work before the legal proceedings check them.

Purchase of Horses Raises Storm.

The purchase of a fire team by certain members of the city council and the mayor is likely to create a big storm between the council and the board. The purchase price of the team was $450. This is claimed by the chairman of the property committee of the board to be exorbitant and above the usual prices paid for horses of this class. It is likely that an injunction will again be brought forward. In the meantime the railroad is straining every nerve to complete the work before the legal proceedings check them.

Art Exhibit at School.

The Lincoln school art exhibit, the Turner art exhibit today. The exhibit will be open all day from 10 a. m. and during the forenoon Saturday. The young folks have traversed the entire city and sold many tickets. The pictures are furnished for the exhibit and the object of selling the tickets was that the funds might be used for the purchase of the pictures for the school. The present exhibit contains many fine pieces of art. Aside from the exhibit there will be a program conducted by the children of the school and also some of the patrons. Considerable interest has been manifested, and Miss Cora Leaverty, the principal, is making preparations to entertain many visitors during the day.

City Council Meeting.

The city council held a most prosy meeting last night. There was nothing of importance up for consideration. The city attorney recommended that no action be taken on Missouri avenue as there was a prospect of an immediate adjustment of the matter. The street railway franchise was still held up because it was thought desirable by the judiciary committee to have certain other features added to the present form of the ordinance.

A petition was received asking for a light at Twenty-seventh and P streets. The building inspector reported the condemnation of a building at Twenty-eighth and Q streets. Copies of the communication sent by the city engineer to Contractor Hugh Murphy were placed on file. The treasurer's monthly report was received. It showed that the disbursements for the last month were $7,781.45, leaving a balance in the treasury of $32,594.50. Warrants for $500 were ordered to pay the registrars and the recent election expenses. Various streets were ordered to be supplied with crosswalks.

An ordinance to grade S street from Thirtieth to Thirty-second was passed. Bonds were ordered for the grading of S from Eighteenth to Twenty-fifth, also for the grading of Thirty-ninth from Q to Y street. An ordinance was passed for the purpose of amending a nuisance of standing water on certain vacant lots. The ordinance charging the grade of A street was passed, also one providing sidewalks on Thirty-ninth street from Q to Y.

The mayor appointed T. J. O'Neill, B. E. Wilcox and H. M. Christie appraisers for damages due the city by the grading of S street from Thirtieth to Thirty-second; also J. J. Ryan, J. F. Murphy and John McMillan for the grading of Thirty-ninth street. The council then adjourned until Monday, November 12.

THURSTON RIFLES DANCE

First of Winter Series of Hops Proves Most Enjoyable Affair.

With the national colors predominating and the floor brightly sprinkled with the gold and dark green uniforms, the dance by the members of Company I, First Nebraska, at Chambers' hall Thursday evening proved a success greater than the boys had even dared to hope. Fully 100 couples attended and a more enjoyable affair could not have been desired.

It was the first dance of the season for the soldier boys and their sweethearts, wives and sisters, and was the opening number of a series to continue through the winter. The walls were draped with flags and the man of the company wore the full dress uniform of the Thurston Rifles. It was a gay, resplendent gathering.

The next event of the series is a dance at the same hall December 5, for which invitations will be issued in a short time. Dimmick's orchestra will probably furnish the music for this occasion.

WOMAN TAKES CARBOLIC ACID

Denizen of the Half World Tires of Life and Swallows Poison.

Georgia Foster, a woman of the lower world, committed suicide Thursday evening by swallowing a ounce of carbolic acid while alone in her room in the new Arcade. After taking the poison she told either inmates of the house what she had done and the police were immediately notified. Police Surgeon Harris worked hard to save the woman's life, but the acid had done its work and she died at 10 o'clock, two hours after taking the liquid. The woman had been drinking heavily, but had been cheerful all evening. Secretly, however, she dispatched a messenger boy for a bottle of the poison and without a word of explanation drank a portion when he returned. It is said to have been the sixth time she attempted similar action. Just before becoming unconscious her companions thought they heard her say "Don't want to die," but they could not be certain. The family of the dead woman formerly resided in Omaha, but recently removed to western Iowa. A sister resides in Council Bluffs. Her relatives were notified by the coroner.
