Characteristic Letters Showing High Esteem from Friends in Many Widely Distant Parts of the World.

The recent death of the late Edward Roelwater, editor of The Bee, has elicited al official messages of condolence and sympathy from the representatives of foreign governments, who were associated with him in the World's Postal congress in lome last spring. The postal administration of France has sent to the Postoffice department at Washington an official letter, a translated copy of which has been transmitted to the family, as follows:

I have learned to my profound regret of the decease of Mr. Edward Rosewater delegate of the government of the United States of America to the Postal congresses of Washington and Rome.

In expressing to you my condelence at this sad loss, I, with all the members of the French delegation to the last congress, render homoge to our distinguished collesgue, so eminently worthy of our esterm on account of his lotty character and the charm of his intercourse, qualities readered still more envisible through the affability and kindness of his personality.

From the German Delegation.

BERLIN, W. 68, Oct. 17, 1906.—Dear Mr. Brooks: It is with profound sorrow that we learned of the untimely demise of the Hon. Edward Ronewater. Surprised of the Sudden death so much the more, as the deceased, at his last presence at Berlin, after having participated in the Universal Postal congress at Rome, was in all his health and vigor, we deplore with the deepect regret the loss of this excellent man, who has taken such a prominent part in promoting the economical interest and specially contributed as much to develop the United States postal service.

We join in extending you our profound sympathy and would be very obliged to you if you might be so kind to tender for deceased.

With kind regards, we remain, sir, very my yours, GIESEKE, Inspector of Posts.

CRAG-Y-NOS CASTLE, Oct. 15, 1998.—
Dear Mrs. Recewater: I was indeed truly grieved to read the sad announcement in the paper you sent me of the death of your husband and I am at once writing you these few lines to tell you how deeply I feel for you in your great sorrow. I can well imagine what a terrible shock it must have been to you all and I can myself scarcely realize that the intellectual, kindly man this really passed away. You know, dear Mrs. Rosewater, that you have my warmest and deepest sympathy. Believe me, yours sincerely.

Still another characteristic letter is the following from William H. Michael, Consuit General of the United States at Calcutta:

CALCUTTA. Oct. 10, 1905.—Mr. Victor Romewater. Editor of The Bee: My Dear Mr. Romewater. I have just learned of the death of your distinguished father. I was so unprepared for such a lamentable event that I can accreely keep my mind off of it. The last time I saw him he was looking so well, his mind and body seemed so strong, and his hopes for the future were so high, that I can account of heart failure. He died as he told me he would like to die pathy, and to have you know that my sorrow is genuine and heartfelt.

A really great man has been touched by the cold wing of the angel of death. He was the author of his own greatness; he was the builder of his own greatness; he was the builder of his own monument of character, to achievement, to all that goes to make up a really useful member of society. From a poor hoy he became a rich man; from an obscure clerk in a store he became known throughout the had his struggles and his enemies, but his struggles and his enemies, but his struggles and his enemies, but his struggles were for the betterment of mankind, and his cuemies generally those who could not use him for their own individual advancement, from sordid motives, or because they did not knew film. No man has done more to build up the state of Nebraska than Edward Rosewater. To say that is enough to entitle him to live in the memory of the people of that state, who should take steps at an early day to erect a monument to his memory.

Fully believing that the sons of this great father will emulate his example and continue to make The Bee a power for good, I am most truly your friend.

FEAR OF FAMINE NOT OVER

Oughterard Board of Guardians Sees Itself Unable to Care for Victims.

DUBLIN, Nov. 10.—That the fears of a point famine are not over is demonstrated by the following resolutions just adopted by the Oughterard Board of Guardians:

That we, the guardians of the poor of the Oughterard union, at a quarter? meeting of the fire department within assembled, view with the utinot canters and alarm the almost total failure of the potato crop this year, the refail of which we know is sure to be a sorious and alarming famine amongst the great majority of the small tenant farmers within this poor and populous union, because the failure of the polato crop this year is the black days of 48 and 4.

We are aware that the pangs of this famine are already beginning to show thomselves, and we are positively certain that before the first of January next the privations and sufferings of a vasi number of the inhabitiants of this union will have been acute in the extreme.

Keewing these facts, and knowing that with only the resources of an already overloaned and highly taxed poor union at our cispessal, we see plaintly that it will butterly impossible for us to meet the pending distress which is sure to prevail, we these force sarnestly and seriounly urge an the government to take early steps towards starting works of a useful and necessary nature calculated to give employment of distressed and familie-articles people who are sure to need it.

From our own observations and from what we can see of the fur-reaching effects of the failure of the positive that the earlier works are harded in the poorer parts of this union the content of the positive that the earlier works are harded in the poorer parts of this union the failure of the points crop, we are harded in the poorer parts of this union the failure of the points or the points of the failure of the points or the prevention of their lines we dear the point of the points of the points or roussed and famine-stricken people who esure to need it.

From our own observations and from at we can see of the fur-reaching effects the failure of the postato crop, we are st positive that the earlier works are st positive that the earlier works are st positive that the earlier works are at any degree of success with the spectre limits throughout the district.
