

Curious Capers of Dan Cupid

Won by a Novel Proposal. MISS KATHARINE STARBUCK, R. I., had five suitors, and couldn't say which one of the five found most favor in her eyes. At the suggestion of the swains she agreed to accept the one making the most original and novel proposal. Charles Vernon Kearns was the winner, and this is the way he proposed: Kearns called one morning and suggested to Miss Butler that they ride over to Butterwood, where his little yacht was lying, and sail down to Chippagoet Island for a picnic lunch. She accepted and shortly after noon the little yacht was steaming westward over the shining waters of the bay. Miss Butler has since confessed to one of her most intimate friends that she was the happiest afternoon of the five weeks' test and that she hoped Kearns would win.

Kearns was quiet and his face was firm. His smile, but his smile was that of a man determined to win. He spoke not a word of love, but they talked of the beauty of the day and Miss Butler sang softly and they flew along before the light, steady breeze. Two miles off Chippagoet Kearns acted suddenly. He had for two minutes been leaning his head on her breast and suddenly, without a word, he stepped over to where Miss Butler was sitting as if to sit beside her. The girl's heart gave a little jump, probably for she felt that the proposal was about to be made. Kearns stopped suddenly, placed his arms around her and, lifting her lightly, threw her overboard.

The girl, although an expert swimmer, was so astonished she almost sank, but rising to the surface she began paddling and saw the yacht fifty feet off, coming around with Kearns at the tiller. He looked anxiously toward her and when he saw her swimming, he called out: "Miss Butler, I love you. Will you be my wife?" There was no response and Miss Butler continued to swim, although her wet garments hampered her movements. Kearns brought the yacht up closer and repeated his question.

"I won't," snapped Miss Butler, now thoroughly angry and indignant. Kearns calmly sat down and filled his pipe. Two minutes later he called: "Will you?" Miss Butler was tiring and she sputtered something. Kearns vows she said "yes" and Miss Butler is noncommittal. At any rate, he rescued her. She insisted on being taken home and in spite of all Kearns' efforts to make it up she sat silent until they landed.

During the trip by rail not a word was spoken. And since then, although Kearns has been constant in writing and in calling, Miss Butler has kept up her own life, but according to her friends, she is preparing her trousseau. Met. Loved, Jilted, Wed. recorded in this country. It is claimed the marriage might have taken place within an hour following the meeting, but the couple had it been possible to get the license at the time.

Annie Mosier, a German girl, is the bride, and Rudolph Weinhofer, a thirty-year-old merchant of Braddock, is the bridegroom. When asked about her marriage, the bride said she did not inquire particularly as to whether she loved Weinhofer, but added that she liked his looks and that no person else had ever asked her before to marry him.

The girl had been in this country three months. She went to work at the home of Max Schiesinger, 60 Braddock avenue, Braddock, a few days ago, taking the place

Prizes for Cupid's Victims. During the last year Charleston, Ill., has gained considerable reputation as a Great City, the city never going there to wed from neighboring towns, and especially from Indiana, numbering several hundred.

The fame of the town in this respect began two years ago, when the Rev. C. C. Digby was mayor. At the bride wishing the service prescribed by the Methodist church he gave it with due solemnity, if the bridegroom preferred the strictly legal form laid down by the statutes, he gave that in a brief, concise manner. Since Mayor Digby went out of office there has been a brisk rivalry between the ministers of the town and the justices of the peace. The culmination of this friendly strife was reached when the four justices published a card offering to perform all marriage ceremonies free of charge until further notice.

FORTUNES FOR ALL WHO INVEST NOW SAVES $9,711,655 A YEAR

Unusual Opportunity Now Offered the Man of Small Means to Become Independently Rich.

Every great electrical invention has made fortunes for its original stockholders. The American Bell Telephone Company, invested in its stock at its organization. Solicitors went from door to door in several cities begging people to buy the stock, but many laughed at the idea of there ever being a telephone. It was hard to make investors see the possibility of the business of those who did are among the world's richest people.

Such chances are not often offered the small investor. The first such opportunity in a great many years, that gives every promise of success, is now being offered in a simple and universal demand in the electric Signograph and Semaphore. Some of the best railroad experts in America declare these instruments will prevent railroad collisions, of which there is an average of 100 every year in the United States. With these instruments the train dispatcher has constant control over every train on his division. The Signograph and Semaphore gives privacy to party telephones and permits the regular telephone to be used by any one of 100 or more telegraph offices without the knowledge of other operators and without interfering with the regular telephone circuit.

RAILROAD APPROVES SYSTEM. No extra wires are required. The cost is so small and the advantages are so great that it is predicted by some of the best experts in America that all railroads will adopt the system. One Signograph is required for 1,000 telephones. There are over 13,000 telephones in use and a monthly rental of 25 cents each—the amount offered—$9,711,655 instruments will cost $300,000 a year.

There are 200,000 miles of railroad in the United States and less than 10 per cent is equipped with a signal service because of the inefficient systems heretofore used and their great cost. If only one-twentieth of this mileage were equipped with the Signograph and Semaphore the stockholders would earn $400,000 a year, 20 per cent on the present selling price of the stock in addition to the revenue from the telephone company.

50,000 LIVES LOST. More than 50,000 lives are lost last year in property destroyed in railroad collisions and 50,000 persons were killed or injured. The amount would cover the entire cost of the Signograph and Semaphore system over every mile of railroad in the United States for two years and make the horrors of railroad collisions unknown.

Experts admit the necessity for these instruments. President Roosevelt has referred to the necessity for safety devices in two of his messages. The bill appropriated by Congress to be used in enforcing the safety of railroads. For railroads have been indicted by the United States Attorney-General for violations of the law, and far-sighted investors are turning their money into the company. Every statement made herein will be verified to the letter. No hidden profits of the capital stock is now for sale. No one will be asked to invest a cent until he has thoroughly examined the merits of the proposition. All who can be urged to come and see these instruments in operation. Those who want to know the full details of the company, its organization, its profits, and what experts say it should write at once for full particulars. Stock is now being sold at 50 cents a share, with value $1.00 per share, non-assessable. The price will be advanced to $1.00 a share as the business grows. Each block of 50,000 shares is disposed of. The right is reserved to advance the price without notice. Those who wish to take this stock before the price advances may send their remittance with the distinct understanding that the entire remittance will be returned at any time within ten days of date of the order if they are not thoroughly satisfied with the proposition. In order to insure securing stock at the present price remittance should be sent at once. Payments are accepted in cash or installments of one-fourth down and one-fourth monthly for six months. No subscription of less than 100 shares will be accepted. A discount of 5 per cent will be allowed on all subscriptions accompanied by remittance in full. Address all inquiries to or call in person on National Mortgage Investment Company, 201 N. First National Bank Building.

Several Short Stories With Sharp Points

The Pretek of Cosnevello. ORSBELY Mr. Roosevelt and some of his friends can discover the moral of the following anecdote which Rev. R. W. Alexander tells, suggests the Tarboro Southerner.

An old colored man stole a pig and after getting home with the animal he went to pray before retiring. His wife heard him praying to the Lord to forgive him for stealing the pig. She went to sleep with Uncle Eph still praying. Later in the night she woke up and saw her husband still kneeling in prayer. At daybreak his supplications had not ceased. "Eph, why don't you come to bed?" asked his wife. "Let me lone, 'Riah; de mo' I tries to 'plain to de Lord how I come to steal dat pig de wusser I gits mixed."

A Life-Saver at 12. Johnny Burns, the 12-year-old son of John W. F. Burns, an employee on the American Print Works at Fall River, Mass., is one of a number of boys who like the idea of abolishing grade crossings at Fall River. Their interest in the subject of grade crossings centers in the rafts on Crab pond that are used by the workmen, grade rails being pre-empted by the small boys and made use of when the men are not around the place.

One day in August six boys got on a raft, two of them, thinking, no doubt, to play a practical joke, jumped ashore, untied the rope and shoved the raft into the pond. Practical joking is quite often only another name for thoughtlessness, and sometimes very cruel actions, and these two boys were having some "fun" at the expense of their four helpless companions, or rather victims, who didn't know what to do. "Let's dive over and swim for it," said Johnny Burns; and the others said, "It's a go." So Johnny and another boy swam ashore. That left two on the raft, and one of them "dived in," but he could not swim a stroke. "Help! I can't swim!" he shouted when he came up. Johnny Burns plunged in, grabbed him, kept his head above water and got him ashore. The one left alone on the raft could not swim, and they all know it. He was terribly scared, and Johnny expected to see him tumble into the water. One of the boys handed Johnny a rope, one end of which he took in his teeth, and in he went again. Swimming straight to the raft, he tied one end of the rope to a nail in the raft, and taking the other end in his teeth he pulled out for the wall with it. Then a jump and landed all right.

About three weeks previous to this advertisement a little boy named Lerner captived from one of the rafts and was brought safely to shore by Johnny Burns and another boy of about his age named John McGuire.

The Bright Boy. In a school room the first primary grade was listening to the teacher reading a description of Columbus' first voyage to America. The history was written in words of one syllable. The teacher reads: "Queen Isabella said her gems to help Columbus." "Now, children," she said, "who can tell me what gems are?" Instantly, Robert sprang to his feet, his hands waving frantically and his eyes flashing. "Well, Robert," she said. "Biscuits!" yelled Robert.—Boston Herald.

Looking for His Ear. An English naval officer tells this story of a servant named Andrews: "We were practicing with a pistol in my brother's quarters and Andrews was in a small dressing room adjoining, when a ball went through the door and clipped off part of an ear. Most men would have made some remark. He did not, and we knew nothing about it until by chance, looking into the room, we saw him groping about under the table for something he had lost. 'What are you looking for, Andrews?' said my brother. He drew up, stood at attention and replied in an apologetic tone, as if deprecating his master's wrath: 'I was only looking for a bit of my ear as come off when you fired that shot through the door, sir.'"

What Text? Bishop Strachan of Toronto once received two church wardens who complained that their clergyman wearied the congregation by repeating a sermon. He had preached it twice. Neither of the church wardens could remember, "Go back," said the bishop, sternly, "and ask your clergyman to preach the sermon once more, and then come back and tell me the text."

Getting Down to Trath. Rarely has a double meaning turned with more deadly effect upon an innocent perpetrator than in an advertisement lately appearing in an English newspaper. It wrote: "Wanted, a gentleman to undertake the sale of a patent medicine. The advertiser guarantees it will be profitable to the undertaker."

YOU LIKE IT
YOU are not a shoemaker, so there's no need of going into an analysis of the construction of the "Queen Quality" Shoe. But the fact remains that it satisfies over two million wearers. They know they like it; that it gives style to the foot; that it gives comfort the first day worn. And that is enough. It holds its shape longer than other ready made shoes because it fits. Yet the enormous business done on "Queen Quality" Shoes keeps the prices moderate.
