Ward P. Foster, a brick musun, died resterday afternoon at the residence of W. J. Barry, 2000 Avenue C with whom he boarded, from drinking carbolic acid. Whether the dead man drunk the acid in tentionally or by mistake is not known. Members of the family with whom be lived are inclined to believe that he drank the like it. See it. It is quite different to the acid in mistake for some medicine which he had been taking for a cold.

Poster, it appears, had been sitting talking with Mr. Barry and other members of the family shortly before 11 o'clock, when he went out into the back yard. A short while later one of the family found Foster lying on the buck porch with the half empty bottle of carcolic acid by his side. He was conscious, but unable to speak, and died three hours later without saving word. City Physician Rice and Dr. Smith Bellinger were summoned, but efforts to counteract the effects of the acid proved

He said he was of the opinion that Poster drank the carbolle acid in mistake or medicine he was taking.

The two-ounce bottle of carbolic acid of which Foster drank half of the contents, bore no label. It was stated at the Barry home that Foster had been in the habit of using the acid on corns.

The body was removed to Cutier's undertaking rooms, and will be taken today to Alden, Id., at the request of the parents. Coroner Traynor decided that an inquest would be unnecessary.
